COUNTY AWARDS PROGRAM LAUDED AS INSPIRATION

Messages Praise The Constitution for Reawakening Citizens' Interest Throughout Georgia.

BENEFITS CITED FOR NON-WINNERS

Dodge Asserts That Advancement in 1937 Will Be All-Time Stimulus.

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

Reawakened citizen interest in county affairs, inspired by The Atlanta Constitution's $7,500 Progressive Government Awards for 1937, is more valuable than the actual cash awards, winners declared yesterday in a series of messages to Major Clark Howell, president and publisher of The Constitution.

A co-operative citizenry, ready to assist in solution of county governmental problems means that those counties which did not win awards are winners anyway, officials of several of the winning counties pointed out.

The messages came to The Constitution offices as a spontaneous reaction to the announcement of winners by judges. They praised the awards program, lauded The Constitution for sponsoring the competition and expressed gratitude to Major Howell for initiating the undertaking.

In some instances, the messages came from commissioners, in others from newspaper editors, but all were high in praise of the program as one of the outstanding contributions to county government progress for the year.

FIRST AWARD WINNER THANKS CONSTITUTION

Following are the messages: W. D. McCranie, commissioner of Dodge county (Eastman), winner of the $3,500 first award:

"Deeply appreciative and gratified on advice that Constitution awards competition judges have selected Dodge county as the outstanding county in all Georgia on her accomplishments in 1937. This was possible because of a belief and deep conviction that such a progressive program was a necessary aid to our people's attainment of the happiness and prosperity to which they are entitled, and which you and The Constitution encouraged, emphasized and rewarded through your Progressive Government Awards program.

"This assistance given us by The Constitution has enabled us to make unprecedented advancement during 1937 and will serve as a stimulus for all time.

Vanguard of Progress.

"It will keep us in the vanguard of progressive county government in Georgia, and will make Dodge county a better county for moulding citizens commensurate with those of hitherto more favored sections.

"Our people are overjoyed and recognize and appreciate the wonderful service The Constitution has rendered the entire state through this program. A lasting

KONRAD HENLEIN.

Henlein Says Followers Demand Full Equality With Czechs and Rights To Do What Others Do.

EIGHT MEASURES TELL PARTY'S AIMS

'Can Not Longer Tolerate Conditions,' Statement by Leader Says.

KARLOVY VARY, Czechoslovakia, April 24.—(P)—Konrad Henlein, leader of Czechoslovakia's 3,500,000 Germans, said today autonomy and complete equality with Czechs must be granted to them.

Otherwise, he said in a formal statement of demands in a speech before a congress of leaders of the Sudeten German party, the minority would not consent to remain part of the state "into which we were incorporated against our will."

"We Germans will continue to regard ourselves as oppressed so long as we are not free to do whatever Czechs may do," he said.

Listing eight demands which he said must be fulfilled, Henlein concluded with a warning:

"We desire neither civil war nor foreign war—but we cannot longer tolerate conditions which to us are a kind of war in the midst of peace."

Compensation Demanded.

Henlein's eight demands were:

1. Complete equality in the status of Sudeten Germans and Czechs.
2. Recognition of these Germans as a corporate group.
3. Definition and recognition of German districts.
4. Autonomous administration of such districts in all departments of public life insofar as the German groups are affected.
5. Legal protection for Germans dwelling outside purely German districts.
6. Removal of "injustices" the Germans have undergone since 1918 and compensation for any damage.
7. Recognition and execution of the principle of "German officials for German districts."
8. Complete liberty for Germans to profess German "volksstum" (nationality) and German "weltanschauung" (world outlook).

CZECH GUARDS FIRE ON POLISH BALLOON

WARSAW, April 24.—(P)—Polish political circles were aroused tonight by reports that a Polish balloon had been fired on by frontier guards and the balloon's two occupants arrested when they landed in Czechoslovakia.

The balloon took off yesterday from the town of Miesice for a night flight and was said to have been carried toward Czechoslovakia by a sudden change of wind.

Polish officials have asked re-

BERLIN SECRETLY BUILDING FLEET TO BE UNEXCELLED

Navy Department's Confidential Reports Show Nazis Plan To Surpass New U. S. Program.

FIFTY WARSHIPS TO AUGMENT ARMS

Reich Construction Methods Are Most Modern; Save Thousands of Tons

(Copyright, 1938, by United Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 24.—German arms, already the most powerful striking force in Europe, are being augmented by a fleet that will far surpass the proposed huge increase in American naval power, according to confidential reports received by the Navy Department.

The reports, the United Press was informed tonight, show Germany is building, or has appropriated funds for, a total of 51 warships, including five super-dreadnaughts, two aircraft carriers, three heavy cruisers, four light cruisers, 12 destroyers and 25 submarines.

President Roosevelt's $1,157,000,000 naval expansion program calls for construction of only three battleships, two aircraft carriers, nine light cruisers, 23 destroyers and nine submarines, a total of 48.

Equal to Any.

"On a ship for ship basis," a high navy official said, "the new German navy would be at least the equal and perhaps the superior of any in the world upon completion of the present program."

"Of course, the new German navy would not be nearly so powerful as America's or Great Britain's if only present building plans are carried out, but there is no assurance that Germany will stop at this point any more than there is that any other power will stop."

"It is a significant fact, also, that practically every ship in the German navy, including all but a few of those which are already afloat, will be the last word in naval construction and design."

Germany presently has 74 warships, including five capital ships, six light cruisers, 27 destroyers and 36 submarines, of which only two battleships and five destroyers are "over-age."

Treaty Permission.

The German navy treaty with Great Britain, giving the greater reich a fleet 35 per cent as powerful as Britain's, will allow an additional program almost as large as the one now under way provided England carries out her contemplated building.

The five new German battleships, according to Navy Department reports, will be approximately 31,400 tons each. However, German construction methods, in which thousands of tons of displacement are saved by welding the hulls instead of riveting, will make these vessels, in over-all size and fighting strength, the equivalent of 40,000-tonners.

Daylight Saving? 'Phooey!' Declare Highway Employees in Losing Hour

Employees of the State Highway Department yesterday indicated a belief that Chairman W. L. Miller doesn't understand the meaning of daylight saving.

Until Saturday their working hours were from 8 in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon with the customary hour off for lunch. And they were looking forward to a long pleasant summer, on at 8 and off at 4, which really would be 3 o'clock sun time.

Late Saturday the chairman posted an order on the bulletin board. It said that in the future the hours of work would be from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., with one hour off for lunch.

"Of course, some of the employees won't like the extra hour of work," Miller said yesterday. "Chances are the taxpayers will like it, though. After all, the folks in the highway department will be working only 8 hours a day."

"The board thinks eight hours is a fair day's work and we believe that, for the most part, our employees will agree that it is right," Governor Rivers was asked to comment.

"I wish I could get finished in eight hours," he replied. "My job takes from 14 to 18 hours each day. I'm very happy when I can get my work done between sun up and sun down. Those days have been mighty few since I took office."

ROOSEVELT'S TALK WITH FORD VIEWED AS NEW STRATEGY

President Believed Seeking To Win Support of Industrial Independents to His Recovery Plans.

U. S. LABOR POLICY IS MAJOR BARRIER

Farley's Attack on 'Down-town New York' Is Recalled as Significant.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—(P)—President Roosevelt's impending meeting with Henry Ford, Thursday, has stirred speculation about the place it may have in the cycle of presidential steps to meet the recession and congressional challenges to his leadership.

That the Ford conference does have some special significance in the minds of the President and his close advisors can hardly be doubted. There have been hints it would be followed by similar talks with other industrial and business leaders, presumably in regard to the administration's lending—spending—credit expansion program.

Seek Independents.

Moreover, the Ford visit seems to many observers important because it conveys a suggestion as to the type of industrialists with whom the President may talk individually in the near future.

Ford's independence in the automotive industry itself, and his long record of hostility toward great financial interests centering in New York, suggest that administration forces see possibilities of enlisting important industrial independents behind the lending—spending program.

Slash at Wall Street.

A recent speech by Postmaster General Farley at Garden City, New York, was recalled in that connection. He slashed at "down-town New York," which means Wall Street. "It is from this source," he said, "that you are told that the President is the enemy of business."

In some quarters the Roosevelt-Ford meeting was regarded as having a much narrower purpose. The manufacturer has said repeatedly that the business tailspin is a temporary phenomenon. Some observers believe that the talk is merely to exchange views as to what can be done by both government and business to help get the automotive industry back in stride as quickly as possible.

Major Hurdle.

The major hurdle any real rapprochement between Ford and the President would have to take, as most observers see it, is that raised by the New Deal labor policy. It is so big an obstacle, that there was wide speculation as to whether that subject will be touched upon at all in the White House meeting.

In his lending—spending message Mr. Roosevelt stood by "the right of labor to free organization, to collective bargaining."

Egypt's Premier Quits In Quarrel With King

CAIRO, Egypt, April 24.—(P)—Egypt's second constitutional crisis in as many days developed today when Premier Mohammed Mahmoud Pasha tendered his resignation in a quarrel with King Farouk over the formation of a "party cabinet."

The young monarch neither accepted nor rejected the resignation.

The quarrel first flared yesterday when the premier was believed to have won his contention for appointing more members of his own liberal party to cabinet posts. However, today's developments showed otherwise.

Salesgirl Wins Film Role in Talent Search

Jean O'Neill, 20, a member of the sales force of a New York department store, submitted her photograph in a talent search in which 5,000 other girls competed. She was selected for a part in a motion picture. When the film is completed she will study dramatic art.

PUBLIC AID ASKED IN GRAFT INQUIRY

Investigation Will Be Resumed Today; Andrews Calls for 'Patience.'

The Fulton county grand jury's investigation of alleged police graft and prison pay-offs will be resumed this morning, with a number of new witnesses expected to be questioned.

The inquiry, temporarily sidetracked for the trial of Pee Wee Burns, will go forward vigorously, Special Prosecutor E. E. Andrews said.

To Prosecute Officers. "Nothing will deter the investigation," said Andrews, in a statement in which he called for cooperation of the public and outlined plans for the inquiry.

"Every effort will be used to expose and prosecute all officers involved in the taking of graft and bribes, where evidence is ample to justify an indictment, or sufficiently strong to reasonably expect a conviction," he said.

Patience Asked.

Asking for "patience" on the part of the public, Andrews explained that "to do the job that must be done, the investigating grand jury must have ample time in which to do it. They must have public co-operation, without impatience on the part of the public."

"If we cannot get, and do not get, this co-operation which we ask, the job will be carried on—patiently, untiringly, slowly, of necessity, until the investigation is completed and results accomplished which we have every reason to believe will satisfy the public."

ATLANTAN KILLED AS CAR HITS POLE

Five Are Injured When Auto Leaves New Macon Highway, Turns Over.

Leonard Pierce Coker, 27, cashier for J. I. Case & Company, farm implement firm, was killed early yesterday when the car he was driving crashed into a telephone pole at 1620 Stewart avenue, S. W.

Coker was on his way to spend the night at the home of a friend when at about 2:30 o'clock his car swerved on the broad road just outside the city limits.

Police said the right front tire of his car looked as if it had blown out at the time of the accident.

Lived With Parents.

Mr. Coker lived with his parents at 532 Plum street, N. W. His father, Baxter P. Coker, is a special investigator for the Fulton county solicitor general's office. He was a member of the Payne Memorial Methodist church.

Surviving, besides the parents, is one brother, Albert Lee Coker. Funeral services will be held at 11:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at Spring Hill. Burial will be in Magnolia cemetery.

In another early morning accident three women and two men were injured when the car in which they were riding ran off the new Macon highway, overturned twice into an embankment between Cedar Grove road and Henrico road, eight miles from Atlanta, DeKalb county police reported.

Rickenbacker, Head of Air Lines, Hopes for New Route From Atlanta

Captain Eddie V. Rickenbacker, awarded within 30 days, and we are hopeful of getting it," he said.

Captain Rickenbacker arrived at Candler airport at 11:20 o'clock Atlanta time, last night, in a specially-flown ship that left New York at 7 o'clock, eastern standard time.

He was accompanied by Hugh Knowlton, of Kuhn-Loeb & Company, and William Barclay Harding, of Smith-Barney & Company. Both are partners in the New York investment banking houses and both are directors of the air line.

"Mr. Harding and Mr. Knowlton are with me to get acquainted with people in the cities we serve, and their trip is also in large part of the public, Andrews explained that "to do the job that must be done, the investigating grand jury must have ample time in which to do it. They must have public co-operation, without impatience on the part of the public."

"If we cannot get, and do not get, this co-operation which we ask, the job will be carried on—patiently, untiringly, slowly, of necessity, until the investigation is completed and results accomplished which we have every reason to believe will satisfy the public."

Captain Rickenbacker announced his company is a bidder for mail contracts which will create a new line from Atlanta to Tampa, by way of Albany, Ga., and Tallahassee, Fla.

"The contract is expected to be

BISHOP IS SEIZED, EX-NOBLEMAN, TOO, WITH SIX OTHERS

All Alleged as Leaders in Forming Groups of Terrorists To Aid Foes When War Is Declared.

SABOTAGE, REVOLT HELD PART OF AIMS

Collection and Delivery of Secret Information to Foreigners Alleged.

MOSCOW, April 24.—(P)—The newspaper Robochaya Moskava (The Workers' Moscow) reported today that the archbishop of Moscow and at least eight other churchmen had been arrested on charges of plotting overthrow of the Soviet regime in league with "Fascist spies."

The newspaper did not publish the archbishop's name but merely referred to him as "A."

The disclosure came as many Russians took part in orthodox Easter ceremonies.

It indicated intensification of a drive which in January brought reports of the arrest of eight high Russian orthodox churchmen and numerous nuns and priests.

Bishop Named in Charges. The newspaper said a bishop identified as "D," Archdeacon D. F. Bavanoff and a former nobleman identified as "K" were among those arrested with the archbishop on charges of membership in the counter-revolutionary church Fascist spy organization which, it added, had formed groups in churches of Moscow province.

The archbishop, bishop and nobleman were described as leaders of the organization. As such they were connected with Fascist spies, the newspaper said.

They were charged with preparing agents among clergymen for "insurrection in the rear when war is declared on the Soviet union by capitalist countries," the newspaper reported, adding:

"Through priests and monks they carried out counter-revolutionary, Fascist agitation and spread provocative rumors."

Accused As Terrorists.

The bishop and a priest named Nikotin were accused of organizing a terrorist group in the church of St. Serge in Moscow, while a similar band was formed in a church at Fili, near Moscow, by the bishop and a priest named Glagoleff, Robochaya Moskava said.

At Zagorsk, another city near the Soviet capital, the archdeacon and a monk were accused of building a Fascist organization from the remnants of the Czarist regime.

The bishop was reported to have confessed that organizations to which he belonged included several groups instructed to organize sabotage, spying and mass insurrection in event of war.

Protestant clergymen also were arrested as leaders of allied organizations.

FUNERALS ARE HELD FOR MINERS KILLED IN COAL EXPLOSION

Investigation To Open Today in Deaths of 45 Men at Grundy, Va.

GRUNDY, Va., April 24.—(AP)—A sorrowing coal mining community, strangely silent except for hubbub of the thousands of curious persons milling about the site of Virginia's worst mine disaster since 1932, began today to bury its dead—45 hardy men ranging in age from the teens to the middle fifties.

Officials of the Red Jacket Coal Company, whose Keen mountain mine was wrecked in the terrific Friday blast that trapped the night shift as it went on duty, had been unable to determine the number of widows and fatherless children left by the ill-fated crew when it strode unwittingly into the jaws of death underground.

Mine Foreman Henry Cook, who estimated that less than 20 percent of the victims had lived in the Keen mountain community—bright green and yellow cottage settlement three miles from the mine, said mine officials and state mining inspectors would launch an investigation tomorrow.

"But there is no doubt," he added, "that it was a coal dust explosion. It couldn't have been anything else."

The first funeral was that for J. L. Blevins this afternoon at Richlands Baptist church. He was decapitated by a massive mine motor, flung down the mountainside in the furious blast.

One body, that of Ernest Boyd, was sent to Carbon Hill, Ala., the most distant home of the 45. The body of R. H. Gentry will go to Mountain City, Tenn.

Several of those killed were from Kentucky, and several others, including the 30-year-old May brothers, Tom and Lonnie, came from Matewan, W. Va.

All of the victims were fairly young. Arvil Norris, who had started work only a few days before, and Floyd Compton were the youngest—18—while Glenn Ratliff, the oldest, was only in his fifties.

ROME TO GET DATA ON FLOOD DAMAGE

ROME, Ga., April 24.—Romans will be given a statistical analysis of the losses incurred here during the flood two weeks ago. The survey, conducted with the Chamber of Commerce co-operating, will be used by federal authorities in determining the amount of warranted expenditures in riding the city of future high waters and inundated areas.

In line with the same work like surveys will be conducted all along the Coosa-Alabama watershed from the headwaters of the Oostanaula and Etowah river to Mobile bay.

County Awards Program Is Lauded as an Inspiration

Constitution Praised for Re-awakening Citizens' Interest in State.

and gracious contribution has been made to our county.

"It is in a spirit not only of pride but thankfulness that the citizens of Dodge county accept so great a benefit.

"My joy is unbounded. This recognition will stimulate us to greater efforts in the future, and your program, awakening the counties of Georgia in 1937, serves as a foundation for your greater Plant-to-Prosper program in 1938, which will prove a veritable benediction to multiplied thousands of Georgians. Again I thank you."

DEKALB PRAISES AWARDS PROGRAM

First vice president of the Association County Commissioners of Georgia, Charles A. Matthews, commissioner of DeKalb county (Decatur), and winner of $1,000 for second place.

"In behalf of the citizens of DeKalb county and its commissioner, I wish to thank you and The Atlanta Constitution for the Progressive Government Awards Campaign.

"We are happy to have been selected as second place winner, and are grateful to the judges for their consideration but, above all, we realize that the awakened interest of citizens is of paramount importance to the future advancement and progress of our county.

"We have enjoyed our participation in the awards program. It has accomplished many things in our county which would not have been done had we not been interested in The Constitution's program.

"I personally appreciate the interest The Constitution and your magnificent offer has stimulated among the county governments of Georgia. The fine results of county participation in the program will be felt for many years to come.

"I assure you that I speak the sentiments of each and every citizen of our county when I say that we most sincerely thank you and The Constitution for making it possible for us to show you and Georgia what a good county we have, and appreciate very much the check, which we shall use for some good cause."

CHARLTON COUNTY WIRE APPRECIATION

Charlton county (Folkston), third place and $500 winner, P. Ward Harrison, editor of the Charlton County Herald.

"On behalf of the citizens of Charlton county generally, please be assured of our grateful appreciation for the distinction of winning third place in your Progressive Government Awards for 1937, and for the generous check which goes with it. That your splendid and effective movement for the betterment of Georgia has been truly state-wide in scope, and beneficial results are indicated by the fact that it has extended way down here on the Florida line and has accomplished a magnificent record of progress for Charlton county.

"Our people have been brought closer together in a spirit of unity and organized co-operation during this campaign for progress than ever before.

"A movement has never before been launched that contributed in greater degree to the general welfare and advancement of Charlton county and the entire state, than has this friendly competition in progress in which even the losers are winners.

"In this movement The Atlanta Constitution has worthily maintained its traditions for genuine service to Georgia and the south established under such notable editors as Henry W. Grady and Clark Howell Sr., and demonstrates that its destinies have been placed in capable hands under your progressive leadership."

THANKS EXPRESSED BY BULLOCH COUNTY

The following messages were received from winners of congressional district awards amounting to $250 each:

Fred W. Hodges, chairman for the Bulloch county (Statesboro) commission, first district winner:

"In behalf of people of Bulloch county we wish to express our sincere appreciation of the award to our county of the first congressional district in your 1937 county government campaign.

"We feel that your work in creating more interest in what is being done in the county governments will have state-wide effects. It has been a pleasure to have had a small part in working with you in this campaign. The cash award to our county will be used for some civic work that will be available to a large number of our people and we thank The Atlanta Constitution for having made this possible.

"We deeply appreciate the work you are doing through your paper for the people of Georgia and congratulate you on the great amount of good done and interest created in county governments in this contest."

DECATUR COUNTY PROUD OF AWARD

John E. Drake, chairman, speaking for the Decatur county (Bainbridge) commission, second district winner:

"The commissioners of Decatur county are indeed happy of being awarded second congressional district prize in your Progressive Government Award movement.

"Naturally we feel that we have made economical progress, bearing in mind the best services with least expense to our taxpayers, striving to make the tax burdens as light as possible. We feel indebted to our educational and health departments especially for their assistance in making this county progress advantageous to our citizens.

"All other county, city and civic organizations and citizens of our county have and are co-operating with us in our efforts to make of Decatur one of Georgia's best counties.

"We are highly appreciative of the interest shown by The Constitution in the development of every section of Georgia.

"Decatur will continue to strive to be one of the state's best counties. Many thanks to you."

SCHLEY TO CONTINUE FORWARD MOVEMENT

C. W. Wall, chairman, Schley county (Ellaville) commission, third district winner:

"We want to express our sincere appreciation for the fine recognition given Schley county in selecting it as the winner of the third district award in your governmental program. When the program was announced we felt it was a privilege to compete and we want to reiterate our acclaim of such a broad plan which has gone far toward promoting awakening of public interest in better government.

"We want to emphasize that the program has stimulated a tremendous awakening of interest among heretofore unconcerned persons in Schley county. We feel particularly proud of this signal honor because the third district is the largest in Georgia and we were forced to compete with many counties far larger than ours.

"In accepting this award we want to say that we shall not be content to rest upon our laurels, but shall count it as a challenge to make an even greater effort to go forward in the future."

CARROLL GRATIFIED TO WIN AWARD

Hamp Chappell, Carroll county (Carrollton) commissioner, winner of fourth district award:

"The people of Carroll are gratified to learn that their county has been designated for the fourth congressional district award in The Constitution's $7,500 progressive government awards for 1937. We feel that the unusual accomplishments made in the county during the year were due in large measure to the incentive spurred by The Constitution's campaign. The paper did a splendid job in promoting the contest.

"Sponsored locally by the Carrollton Lions Club, the progressive government drive was mapped early in the year by a county-wide steering committee under the leadership of Chairman J. J. Thomasson and Lions Representative R. M. Strozzer.

"Notable improvements were made along the following lines of development: Rural electrification, good roads, home beautification, highway work, rural social life, agricultural development and industrial promotion.

"Credit is due the project chairman and many other Carroll citizens for the time and effort spent on the improvement work.

"We appreciate the opportunity given by The Constitution for entering and working in the progressive government contest."

MONROE PRAISES AWARDS PROGRAM

Commissioners James A. Tribble, chairman; J. T. Banks and H. W. Freeman, of Monroe county (Forsyth), winner of sixth district award:

"Monroe county deeply appreciates being designated as a winner of the sixth congressional district award. We feel that The Constitution has rendered a great service to the counties of Georgia, and that much progress will result from the activities of this contest.

"Your paper has always stood in the forefront of progress in Georgia. What the winning counties have done, all other counties can do, and doubtless as a result of your efforts and encouragement, vast improvements will be made by all Georgia counties.

Dodge Asserts That Advancement in 1937 Will Be All-Time Stimulus.

"Your contest has awakened civic pride. You have sown valuable seed which will bring forth a valuable harvest for the people of Georgia.

"We know you will keep up the good work and we know you will have the full co-operation of all the counties of Georgia. We are proud indeed of the achievement we have been able to attain for our county."

PROGRAM DESCRIBED AS FINE MOVEMENT

Commissioner A. V. Neal, of Bartow county (Cartersville), winner of the seventh district award: "Bartow county deeply appreciates the honor of being awarded first prize for the seventh congressional district in The Atlanta Constitution's Progressive Government Awards for the Year 1937. Congratulates you for sponsoring this fine movement for improvement in county government in our state."

HABERSHAM CITIZENS EXPRESS APPRECIATION

Judge Frank E. Gabriels, commissioner of Habersham county (Clarksville), winner of the ninth district award:

"On behalf of the citizens of Habersham county, I wish to express my very deep appreciation to The Atlanta Constitution for this award. It came as a very pleasant surprise to us who live in the hills of Habersham. Our citizens and citizens of the state of Georgia, owe you and your agent paper a debt of gratitude for waking them up to some of the possibilities they have in their own counties.

"Through this contest our people have been drawn closer together and have really shown what co-operation can do. They now have that spirit and I believe greater progress in the future years will come to our county.

"Your work last year has laid the foundation for a greater Georgia. It is great to receive this award, but greater than the money is the progressive spirit caused by this contest."

E., who was treated and dismissed for cuts and bruises, and Miss Sarah Elker, of 750 Crew street, S. W., who was treated and dismissed for lacerations of the head.

Another passenger, Mrs. W. H. Cross, 17, of 1283 Metropolitan avenue, S. E., was taken to Emory University hospital by Dekalb Policeman V. B. Hill. She suffered severe lacerations and was in "fair" condition.

The policeman said he could find no apparent cause for the wreck. The car was almost demolished, he said.

HUNGARIANS DEMAND SPLIT FROM CZECHS

BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 24. (AP)—Twenty thousand persons demanded dismemberment of Czechoslovakia today in a spirited session of the Hungarian Revision League.

The league, sponsoring its first legally permitted meeting since 1933, adopted a resolution which stated the historic moment for changing the treaty had arrived.

It takes 60 men working eight hours daily and 1,000 gallons of lardicide and insecticide a day to protect Shanghai's International Settlement from the malarial mosquito.

measure one of inspection," said Captain Rickenbacker.

Will Go to Texas.

The trio will leave here tonight for Houston, Texas.

Discussing the advantages of Atlanta as an important link in the air transport chain, Captain Rickenbacker said a movement has been started for a line from Houston to Brownsville, which would be an international trunk line between New York and Mexico City, by way of Atlanta, New Orleans and Houston.

He pointed out that this proposed link would be some 200 or 300 miles shorter than the present northern route through Dallas and Kansas City.

He also explained that there are no mountains over the route and that weather conditions are better than over the present route.

Important to Atlanta.

"Such a line, naturally, would increase the importance of Atlanta as a port of call," he continued. "Traffic would be greatly increased, and Mexico City would then be only 14 hours from New York by sleeper service and only 9 hours from Atlanta."

The importance of contacts with South America cannot be overlooked, and this link would bring the two hemispheres much closer than at present.

"The only frontiers left are those below our southern borders."

Another new route which Captain Rickenbacker said he hoped would soon be a reality is Jacksonville, Tallahassee, Pensacola, Mobile and New Orleans.

The Atlanta airport is now the third largest in the nation in point of traffic.

Smythe Gambrell, attorney, met the party at the airport last night. Harding and Knowlton said they "hoped to do a good job for the communities along the line and to keep the line independent."

MEN TRY TO SAVE ZOO SHIP ANIMALS

Grounding of Craft Perils Cargo of $1,000,000.

BOSTON, April 24.—(AP)—While a northeast wind kicked up a swell, longshoremen today worked feverishly to salvage part of the $1,000,000 cargo of the British zoo ship, City of Salisbury, half submerged off Graves Light in Boston harbor.

A jagged crack severed the 3,500-ton freighter, which went aground Friday with her cargo of wild animals and bales of wool, jute and sisal. The bow of the vessel was below water while its stern remained caught on a reef. None of the crew was lost.

DALADIER FINISHES
DRAFT OF DECREES
BUT DELAYS ACTIONLoosening of Credit, Cut in Production Taxes, Higher
Duties Reported Planned.

PARIS, April 24.—(P)—Premier Edouard Daladier finished today his draft of new legislation under the decree powers granted him but abruptly changed his idea of when it should go into effect.

It was decided today he would have the cabinet review his draft without voting on it, postponing final action until after May 1.

Daladier and his foreign minister, Georges Bonnet, will fly to London Wednesday for a conference on the international political situation with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

The premier today went over the texts of the proposed decrees with his finance minister, Paul Marchandeau.

Circles close to the finance ministry reported the first of the series of proposals formulated by the premier and Marchandeau included:

1. Loosening of credit for all industrial activities in an effort to increase production, particularly in those plants supplying national defense equipment.

2. Governmental support—such as reduction of production taxes—for industries whose profits are being returned into business for enlargement of plants and modernization of equipment.

3. Increases in customs duties on certain unspecified imports to protect French manufacturing.

Bill Owned By Atlanta Girl Tells Tragic Story of Currency of South

Days of War Between the States Recalled by Ellen
St. John Barnwell.

A Confederate bill which tells the tragic financial story of the currency in the south during the War Between the States is owned by an Atlanta girl, Ellen St. John Barnwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Barnwell. It bears the likeness of her maternal great-grandmother, Ellen St. John, wife of Thomas St. John, of Mobile, Ala.

Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, wishing to honor Mr. and Mrs. St. John, had the accompanying picture taken to be used on the Confederate currency.

It shows Ellen St. John knitting socks for the Confederate soldiers. As a large landholder, cotton shipper and owner of the docks in Alabama's only seaport, Mr. St. John was one of the most prominent men in the state. His handsome home was the center of social gayeties.

The portrait was placed on three-dollar bills. A large number of bill "fronts" had been printed on huge sheets of paper. But before they could be reversed, finished and issued, the Confederate government suddenly found it did not have the gold to back these three-dollar bills. These half-completed notes could not be finished and put into circulation.

Paper was scarce. Engraving was expensive. The half-printed bills could not be wasted, but "Threes" were useless; "Ones" were needed. So the Confederate government ordered that "Ones" be printed on the reverse side, with the portraits running crosswise. That accounts for the two portraits, marked "Three Dollars," appearing on the back of the issued "Ones."

Now this little crumbling keepsake is evidence of the financial crash of the Lost Cause.

This Confederate bill, telling the financial story of the currency in the south during the War Between the States, bears the likeness of Ellen St. John, maternal great-grandmother of Ellen St. John Barnwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Barnwell, of Atlanta. The picture shows Ellen St. John knitting socks for the Confederate soldiers.

UNIONS' TIF PERILS
HUGE SALMON PACKFish and Ships Are Ready as AFL and CIO Tie Up
Jobs of 20,000

SEATTLE, April 24.—(P)—A deadlocked union jurisdiction dispute threatened tonight to cut off the country's $45,000,000 annual Alaska salmon pack as well as the jobs of 20,000 men and 80 per cent of the northern territory's revenue.

Ships, plants and men lay idle as the clock time approached for the fish to start moving in the world's richest red salmon area.

Government conciliation had just smoothed out a worker-employer dispute over wages and the great northward movements of the fishing fleets were just being planned when the trouble arose between two unions—one AFL and the other CIO.

Cannery operators announced all plans for the 1938 season would be cancelled unless the controversy was settled by Thursday.

The CIO group refused to consent to an election to determine majority representation for bargaining purposes. It charged an audit of dues-paying workers showed 70 per cent favored CIO.

Conrad Espe, business agent, said the CIO members were willing to submit the matter to election in the fall, but that time did not permit a vote now.

ERNEST DALEY, 42,
FOUND SHOT DEADWife Discovers Husband's Body in Home on Return
From Club.

Ernest Daley, 42, of 199 Powers Ferry road, N. E., was found dead in his bedroom early yesterday from a shot fired from his own pistol.

No one else was in the house at the time the shooting occurred. Daley and his wife, the former Katherine Crandall, had spent the evening at Piedmont Driving Club, but he had excused himself and arrived at home an hour before her.

She discovered his body when she arrived at home.

Daley has lived in Atlanta 18 years and at the time of his death was connected with the Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Company here.

A native of St. Paul, Minn., he graduated from the University of Minnesota, where he was a member of the Zeta Xi fraternity. He served with the American Expeditionary Force in France, being in the Mayo unit.

Surviving, besides his wife, are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Daley, of St. Paul, and an aunt, Mrs. Clayton Cooley, of Minneapolis.

J. M. MORRIS DIES

Louisville Funeral for Former Atlanta.

J. Morton Morris, 63, prominent Louisville (Ky.) insurance man, a resident of Atlanta from 1923 until 1925, died in a Louisville hospital yesterday, friends and relatives here were informed.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Horace Rohrer, of Atlanta; a brother, Craik Morris, Episcopal bishop of New Orleans, La., and four sisters, Mrs. Cotesworth Pinckney, Miss Mary Morris and Miss Juliette Morris, all of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Fred Kelley, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow in Louisville.

TWO BRIDESMAIDS DIE
IN PHOTO STUDIO FIRE

COVENTRY, England, April 24.—(P)—The happy laughter of a bridal party turned to horrified screams in a photographer's studio today when flames enveloped the girls' flimsy frocks, burning two bridesmaids to death.

The bride and six others in the party of 15 were burned seriously.

Petain Observes 82d Birthday;
Still Confident He'll Aid France

PARIS, April 24.—(P)—Marshal Henri Petain celebrated today his 82d birthday, confident he still has a part to play in French national defense more than 20 years after the war which made him a national hero.

The name of the dignified "defender of Verdun" has been increasingly mentioned in recent months during the nation's government troubles as one of the elder statesmen who might steer France through the haze of political maneuvering.

His close association with Premier Edouard Daladier, who also is minister of national defense and war in the cabinet he formed April 10, brought the suggestion of post in the government for the marshal.

Petain, however, was reported to have discouraged attempts to place his name on the government lists.

"He prefers to remain in the background," one of his close associates said.

DAWSON, Ga., April 24.—(P)—Declaring "we are going through another reconstruction era," Quimby Melton, former state commander of the American Legion and publisher of the Griffin Daily News, said today he believed "the high type of men and women needed to save America will come from Georgia and the south."

He spoke at a Memorial Day celebration arranged by the Mary Brantley chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

"Strange doctrines are being preached," he said. "Strange theories are being advanced. The very principles for which the Confederate soldier fought are being called too old-fashioned for modern days."

"Subversive teaching is going on in every section of our state and nation. There seems to be a determined effort to array class

NEW YORK, April 24.—(P)—Jules Wetzlar, of Radburn, N. J., and New York, a dark horse, tonight clung to the lead he established at the start of the masters' individual bridge tournament to top the other 25 players at the end of the third session with 387 1-2 points.

B. Jay Becker, trophy holder and ranking 26th at the end of the first session yesterday, dropped two more matches. His cumulative score was 322 match points.

In second place was Dr. R. H. Ecker Jr., of New York, with 370 points, while Charles Lochridge was third with 363 1-2.

CAGE FOR DRUNKSVoters Favor Pay Cuts for Firemen and Policemen.

WOBURN, Mass., April 24.—(UP)—Mayor William E. (Cage) Kane's lion's cage for tipsy tipplers was doomed tonight by a 2,456-1,876 vote in America's first plebiscite.

His proposals for "liquidation" of "unnecessary" teachers, firemen and policemen, and a pay cut for the remainder, were approved by large margins, however.

Kane was too jubilant at the 6-to-1 general approval given his economy proposals to comment immediately on what disposition he would make of the $300 wheeled cage he had built in the expectation of confining drunks therein and driving them through city streets behind a police prowl car until they were sober.

Fires During Examination.

DENVER, April 24.—(UP)—William Burnham, 18, rested at his home today attempting to recover from the shock of an accidental shooting in which his college chum, Robert A. Steinmeyer Jr., 21, of New Orleans, was killed.

Burnham, a freshman student at the Colorado School of Mines, spent the day with his widowed mother, Mrs. June Burnham, at their home here. The youth obviously was badly shaken over the tragedy at his rooming house in Golden, Col., last night when he accidentally shot and killed Steinmeyer, his classmate and best friend.

The youths had planned to go rabbit hunting together today. They and two other students were examining a small caliber rifle, which they thought to be unloaded, when Burnham accidentally pulled the trigger.

in Car Hit by Woman
Motorist April 13.

Mrs. Oscar M. Morgan, 54, wife of a city policeman, who was injured in automobile accident at Howell Mill road and Reservoir avenue, N. E., on Wednesday, April 13, died last night in a private hospital.

The car in which Mrs. Morgan was riding at the time was driven by her husband. Passengers besides the policeman and his wife included Mrs. Paul Morgan, 57, her sister, and a grandson, Donald Wade, 5, of 436 Ashby street, southwest.

The Fulton county policemen said the accident occurred when Patrolman Morgan turned sharply, after the grandson had asked that they drive past the reservoir so he could see the lake. When the officer turned, a car driven by Miss Lois McDonald, of Bolton, struck his vehicle broadside.

Surviving, besides the sister and husband, are two other sons, Mrs. R. M. Davis, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Ellis Farnham, of Bearden, Tenn., and one daughter, Mrs. H. M. Wade, of Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Awtry & Lowndes.

J. B. KNIGHT, 81, DIES;
LAST RITES TOMORROW

J. B. Knight, 81, retired Gwinnett county farmer, died early yesterday afternoon at his home, 476 Flat Shoals avenue, S. E., following a brief illness.

He came to Atlanta several years ago. Surviving are his wife; three sons, J. H. and W. W. Knight, of Atlanta, and Edmond Knight, of Millen, Ga.; seven daughters, Mrs. H. T. Dinger, of Covington; Mrs. Ada Bearden, Mrs. H. A. Bennett and Mrs. W. C. Hale, of Atlanta; Mrs. Martha Hitchcock, of W. Va.; Mrs. O. B. Jackson, of Monroe, and Mrs. W. P. Roberts, of Good Hope, and one brother, George Knight, of Decatur.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Alcovia Baptist church, Walton county, conducted by the Rev. Ed A. Caldwell. Burial will be in the churchyard, under the direction of A. S. Turner.

BRITISH BOY SCOUTS
PARADE FOR ROYALTY

WINDSOR, England, April 24.—(P)—One thousand Boy Scouts from all parts of the British Isles paraded today in the quadrangle of Windsor castle before King George, Queen Elizabeth, 12-year-old Princess Elizabeth and her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, 7.

The Queen, recovered from a cold, stood beside the King to review the Scouts. Each of the marchers was a holder of the King's Scout badge or a medal for gallantry.

Army Lieutenant Is Injured
As Beer Truck and Auto Crash

Theodore DeTreville, 28, army lieutenant at Fort Oglethorpe, who formerly lived at 12 Sixteenth street, N. E., was injured critically yesterday morning when the car in which he was riding was in collision with a beer truck near Chattanooga, Tenn., according to Associated Press dispatches.

In the car with Lieutenant DeTreville was Ed L. Kimble Jr., 26, of 1410 Peachtree street, N. E., a draftsman for the Georgia Power Company, who was visiting the lieutenant for the week end. Kimble was not injured.

A passenger in the truck, who was injured seriously, told police the automobile of the Atlanta men was parked in the middle of the road and that the truck turned over after hitting the rear of the car. Mrs. John DeTreville, mother of the injured soldier, said hospital attaches had advised her her son suffered severe lacerations of the head, but that he will recover, barring complications.

CALVARY OPPOSES
METHODIST UNIONCongregation Votes 137 to 71 in Ballot Without Any Official Significance.

Members of the congregation of Calvary Methodist church last night voted 137 against and 71 for unification of branches of the Methodist church. The balloting had no official significance and was merely an expression of sentiment.

Dr. Walt Holcomb, pastor, read the unification plan to the congregation, but did not comment on it, leaving the question entirely to the assembly.

A ballot had been placed on the church bulletin board, stating "Do you favor unification? Answer yes or no." A total of 208 votes were cast, members of the congregation writing their choices on slips of paper.

In his sermon Dr. Holcomb scored the "moral, civic and religious letdown of our citizens," saying, in part:

"Reports in the daily press reveal a well-organized underworld ring of racketeers, bootleggers and gamblers in our midst."

"We have lost interest in civic righteousness in the past few years until Atlanta is rapidly becoming the mecca for a criminal element. It is time for our city to wake up and clean up."

"When reports of suspicion of bribery and no suspension of the bribers go out to the nation, it gives the good people of Atlanta, both voters and officials, an unenviable reputation and encourages crooks and criminals from other cities to come to our underworld."

LIQUOR SALE LEGAL
IN ATLANTA TODAYCommerce Within Pale of Law for First Time in a Generation.

Three more Georgia counties had voted to legalize liquor over the week end as Atlanta and Augusta prepared for the start today of their first lawful liquor sales in a generation.

Unofficial returns from an election Saturday in Wayne county (Jesup) showed a vote of 256 to 105 for liquor. Rockdale (Conyers) voted 359 to 301 for legalization, and Mitchell (Camilla) county reported a vote of 549 to 130 for whiskey, with two small precincts missing.

The three counties which voted Saturday were the 24th, 25th and 26th to hold elections under the state's new local option law.

In Atlanta, sales of liquor were scheduled to begin after the first city and state licenses were issued Saturday to Cecil R. Cannon, president of the Henry Grady Hotel Company.

The license was signed by Revenue Commissioner T. Grady Head prior to leaving the city for the week end. His office here announced other license applications would be investigated and passed on when Head returns Wednesday.

Meanwhile, a special city council session tonight will be held to pass on 100 additional applications for licenses. Thus far, 39 retail store licenses have been issued and 68 have been approved by council.

It was reported Head will spend today and tomorrow in Augusta, but Mayor Richard E. Allen said last night he "knew nothing about it."

"I haven't been advised that he is coming," said Mayor Allen, as most Augusta dealers were agreed that there will be no fanfare when legal liquor returns.

Informed circles at Augusta last night said "nothing will happen that has not happened before."

They pointed out there will be no sharp line to mark where "home rule" liquor sales leave off and legal liquor sales begin. Dealers who were doing business before the election will merely continue to do it after obtaining their licenses.

T.B. BROWNE, ATLANTAN
DIES AFTER OPERATION

Thomas George Browne, of 2260 Peachtree road, N. E., died Saturday night in Tampa, Fla., following an emergency operation, relatives and friends here learned yesterday.

He was a native of Detroit, Mich. Surviving are his wife, who was at his bedside in Tampa when he died; two daughters, Miss Mary Browne and Miss Jane Browne; one son, Thomas George Browne Jr., and three sisters, Mrs. Joseph Henshaw and Mrs. Jane Pittman, both of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. W. P. Brown, of Drew, Miss.

Funeral services will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

EUROPE'S NEW MAP

Recent developments in Europe have placed an entirely different interpretation upon the diplomatic map.

Consummation of the Anglo-Italian pact, with the probability that France will eventually become a third party, to some degree at least, in this rapprochement, leaves Germany practically severed from any co-operation with Italy.

However, at the same time, it leaves Germany more than ever the dominant factor in central and eastern Europe. Czechoslovakia is helpless. Her economic life is wholly at the mercy of Hitler. With Germany in control of Austria, the Czech republic cannot trade with other nations except with German consent.

The Anschluss in Austria likewise had extensive and damaging effects upon Italian trade. Germany gained, thereby, access to the Mediterranean and threatens Italian trade with Yugoslavia, Rumania, Hungary, Bulgaria and Greece. Italian trade with Austria, of course, has practically been wiped out.

When Hitler scored his coup in Vienna, it left Mussolini faced with the choice of making new international alignments or becoming reconciled to a place secondary to his German ally. With the Rome-Berlin axis thus weakened, it was natural for Mussolini to look toward the west, to Britain and to France, for help in his financial, economic and diplomatic problems. Geographically, at least, the British-French friendship is more logical for Italy than the German.

And it must never be forgotten that, so long as German troops sit behind the Brenner Pass, Hitler presents a constant threat to the peace and safety of the Italians.

Time only will tell the outcome of the new lineup of the nations. Britain, through Chamberlain, acted in recognition of present conditions, realistically. The immediate outcome of the new policy is to remove the threat of war from Europe for this year, at least. Only two months ago a general world war appeared inevitable. Now it has been pushed off, temporarily at least. This one fact alone will fully justify the Chamberlain policy in the minds of a vast proportion of the public.

The future depends chiefly upon the attitude of Germany and the fate of the Franco-Russian alliance. If the Soviet, occupied with its own problems and fearing the menace of Japan along the Manchurian border, should decide to forget Europe to the west, there would be new significance to the German-Japanese understanding and a still greater threat against Moscow.

The possibilities are innumerable. For the immediate outlook, the world will watch the conflict in Spain and wait to see whether Germany or Italy is, in the final showdown, willing to abandon the large interests their "volunteer" fighters in the ranks of General Franco have won in the strife-torn peninsula.

The attitude of Hitler and of Mussolini, with Britain and France in the background, toward the ultimate victors in Spain, will provide strong indication of their future relationships. It will give the best clue toward peace or war for Europe in this decade.

COMMUNITY ENTERTAINMENT

The second state-wide community entertainment contest is about to get under way. The purpose of these contests, which are to be conducted annually, is to awaken communities to their own possibilities, encourage local talent and promote better relations between urban and rural areas. It will be under the direction of G. V. Cunningham, 4-H Club leader of the Georgia Extension Service, in co-operation with schools and community organizations.

No surer method of developing community leadership has yet been devised than inviting young people to participate in local entertainments. Inexpensive and enjoyable recreation will be provided for the participants, as well as for audiences. Singing together, playing in orchestras, engaging in acrobatics and dances, staging pageants, all tend to develop the art of working and pulling together for the general good of the community.

A well-grounded respect for law and order develops. A better understanding of the value of co-operation and consideration for others, emerges. The spirit of tolerance, so necessary in a democracy, is nowhere shown to better advantage than in community play. And relaxation from routine, as well as rest from over-indulgence, is very desirable in the present day rush.

Programs particularly suited for the out-of-doors are to be featured. Individual prizes, as well as prizes in the form of public address systems to community winners, are to be awarded. And working toward a climax, the finals in the contest are to be held during farm and home week. The movement will be watched with keen interest in all sections of the state.

REDUCING ILLITERACY

The demonstration of a newly-acquired ability to read by a 92-year-old north Georgia woman is a dramatic illustration of the gratifying progress being made in reducing illiteracy among the people of the state. Justly proud of her accomplishment, she is only one of 55,000 persons who have been taught in classes sponsored by the Works Progress Administration during the past year.

Although the program, on a national scale, was conducted for the year at a total expenditure of $20,000,000, the benefits are not to be valued in dollars alone. It is estimated, however, from available statistics, that illiteracy costs the nation in the neighborhood of $800,000,000 annually. The earnings of an illiterate man double, on an average, as soon as he graduates into the literate class. This increases the productive wealth of the nation.

The cost of disease, due to illiteracy and ignorance, is tremendous. But the more enlightened people become, the more attention they give to personal hygiene, thereby eliminating the causes of many diseases which result in premature death.

But nothing connected with the program can be compared to the personal feeling of satisfaction, the genuine happiness, that comes from this beginning of an entirely new life. It is soon discovered that many lonely hours may be turned into profitable enjoyment.

While much justifiable criticism has been leveled at certain forms of federal spending, money for reducing illiteracy, thereby improving the lot of the people, is undoubtedly well spent. No one will begrudge it.

A WISE REGULATION

Bronxville, in New York state, has taken a step which might well be emulated by every city in the country. In time to come it will be necessary and the sooner the plan is generally accepted the better.

All new construction of homes and apartment houses in the New York city suburb must provide parking facilities for each family, under terms of a recent amendment to the zoning laws.

Designed to eliminate parking congestion, the amendment provides that, in the case of apartment houses, space must be provided for an automobile for each family, where heretofore provision for only half that number has been required.

In the case of larger cities, such as Atlanta, these provisions will have to be widened to include downtown buildings. Only in this way will cities be able to provide for the enormous volume of traffic sure to come. Each year sees a steady growth in the number of automobiles in operation, and each year the parking problem becomes more difficult of solution. All steps short of provision of adequate parking space off the streets are but makeshifts that must be changed regularly, restricting more and more the use-value of an automobile, decentralizing business and disrupting city efficiency.

It would be a wise move for city council to study an ordinance requiring adequate parking space within the wall limits of each new downtown structure. It is not a problem impossible of solution.

CHILD STAR TRAGEDIES

The pathetic story of the child movie star again is being unfolded in Hollywood, where Jackie Coogan battles his mother for a share of the fortune he amassed during childhood. Not long ago Freddie Bartholomew, earning a weekly salary in four figures, was revealed to be realizing none of it against his future and was actually going into debt while relatives and others of his entourage lived on his earnings. Hollywood, with all its movie feeling for tragedy, has never produced a film as pathetic in its implications as these true-life stories of its child stars, whether in the ascendant or in eclipse.

The industry has had two glaring lessons within a few months. That industry, as the third party to all contracts, surely should be able to bind those representing the children to arrangements which will insure them some return for their distorted youth. Otherwise, one may be sure the movie public will revolt. Entrancing as these children may be on the screen, the price often paid for their enjoyment is not worth the candle.

Editorial of the Day

TWO APPROACHES

(From the Charlotte News.)

The coal mining industry, as everybody knows, is in a sour state. Employment is unsteady, the companies don't make any money except in the lushest times, the competition of oil and water (for producing electricity) is strong and growing stronger. So the government stepped in.

It passed a law and set up a commission, and the first act of that commission, at present having to be reviewed, was to establish minimum prices for coal. Minimum in this instance is equivalent to higher, and this reflects a notion that seems somehow to obtain in our present government—that if you can't sell enough coal at competitive prices, maybe you could at higher, fixed prices.

The sick part of the coal business is the anthracite end, and it is so sick that not even government dares to prescribe for it. The Mellon Institute, however, while anthracite mining was languishing fearfully, has been researching into the matter of heating with anthracite and has come up with heating equipment that burns anthracite and that requires no attention at all for weeks at a time—from Thanksgiving to Christmas, as the news story put it.

This is not to say that the new burner is perfected or that it will exactly suit the householder when it is. But the contrast in the government's approach and in the engineering approach to the problem of anthracite does say, we believe, something very eloquent.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

U. S. SHORT-WAVE FIGHT WASHINGTON, April 24.—The United States is getting ready to go into the propaganda broadcasting business. In order to offset the persuasive radio programs aimed at South America by the Fascist nations, this country will offer competing entertainment and oratory.

Such at least will be the recommendation of the President's committee now studying the problem of the short-wave radio program proselyting to the southward. The committee has taken the plunge, and now its chief energies are concentrated in the effort to decide just what sort of program should be offered by this country. By all accounts, the committee members are finding it a little difficult to adapt the machinery of the federal government to the strange goals of the amusement industry.

The committee has made a fact study of the reception accorded the German and Italian broadcasts by South Americans. It has had much advice from the State Department, and it also has been in contact with a number of friendly South American diplomats here.

From these latter have come rather depressing reminders that the new radio propaganda scheme can backfire rather seriously. The President's good neighbor policy is still pretty new, the diplomats have pointed out. And while the Italians and Germans are an ocean away, the United States is just next door to South America. Suspicion of imperialist intentions may easily be aroused, even by radio blather.

Nevertheless, the committee is going ahead with its work. Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the communications commission, is also committee chairman. He has delegated the task of program design to John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education. And so it is up to Mr. Studebaker to spot the crooners, if there are any, parcel out time between the comics and the orchestra, and decide how much time the sponsor can use for his sales talk for democracy.

Of course, the chances are that there will be no comics or crooners or orchestras. Very likely, the broadcasts will be purely educational. And thus this country will set out to keep South Americans in the straight and narrow path by the simple expedient of boring them to death.

HENDERSON'S INCOME If you like figures, the tragic seriousness of the new depression is admirably expressed in a national income calculation recently completed by Leon Henderson, Works Progress Administration economist. Mr. Henderson is now listening to, not only as a leading economic adviser of the New Deal's left wing, but also as a man whose forecasts of business conditions have been unusually accurate.

According to Mr. Henderson, while the New Deal boom still continued, the country was moving rather rapidly toward a national income of $72,000,000,000 annually. In the best months of 1937, the country was actually producing $6,000,000,000 in goods and services each month. As nostalgic persons will recall, while that level there were still about 6,000,000 unemployed, a pleasing prosperity then prevailed.

Now that the New Deal boom has been punctured, however, the national income is sinking toward a level of between $52,000,000,000 and $54,000,000,000 annually. On the more significant monthly basis, the value of goods and services produced is from $1,000,000,000 to $1,250,000,000 under what it was last year.

Mr. Henderson's calculation is based on the production index of the Federal Reserve Board and the farm production and income figures of the Agriculture Department. Since it is carefully adjusted for price and other factors, it may be accepted as valid, or at least just as valid as any other national income calculation. Of course, how the President's spending program will affect it, none can tell. New Deal theoreticians cherish the notion that every dollar spent increases the national income by $2.85.

FLYNN PICKS FIORELLO

The indications are unmistakable that New York's able, bouncing Mayor F. H. LaGuardia has been seriously bitten by the presidential fever. The poison, which is coursing through a good many veins these days, has come out in LaGuardia in the form of a home-made international trade program, an extensive southwestern speaking trip, and an impolite suggestion to the President that he could spend WPA dollars faster than Harry L. Hopkins.

Thus, Ed Flynn, the Democratic boss of the Bronx, a Farley crony, and a LaGuardia hater, is being promoted but inconspicuously. Back in 1934, Flynn, who is an important but inconspicuous power in the Democratic party, was visiting Joseph P. Kennedy in Washington. Kennedy asked Flynn what he thought of LaGuardia, who was just then starting his mayoralty.

"Fiorello's quite a fellow," Flynn answered. "You ought to watch him for 1940."

Even if Flynn's prediction does not come entirely true, at least LaGuardia is doing his best to make it.

A Very Special Month.

April, you ought to know by this time, has been a very special month this year. It was proclaimed "Cancer Control Month" for the state by Governor Rivers. And the Georgia Division of the Women's Field Army for the Control of Cancer has been doing wonders to bring before you all the urgency of vigorous effort to reduce, and stamp out, the ravages of this disease.

The public attitude toward cancer is often strange. Many people think there is something disgraceful about having cancer. Why, no informed person can imagine. For the disease strikes anyone, without regard for habits, condition or position in life. It is absolutely impartial in selecting victims. The sufferer has nothing to say, usually, about the initial infection.

Of course, there are practices which doctors say invite cancer infection. But they are innocent practices, with no blame attached. It is after cancer has secured its foothold in the human system that the personal responsibility enters in. And the victim is betraying that responsibility if he, or she, is unwilling to face the unpleasant fact or facts, in any way, to hide the condition from physician and friends.

The only known ways to cure cancer must be applied before the disease has progressed too far. Recognized and properly treated in the early stages it is almost always curable. Progressed too far, man is powerless to checkmate it.

So, Act Wisely.

Only thing to do is to act wisely about it. If you have a lump that doesn't normally belong, anywhere in your flesh, let your doctor examine it. A sore that doesn't heal properly, anywhere, may be cancer. Show it to that doctor of yours.

There are, I believe, only three recognized treatments for cancer, radium, X-rays, and the surgeon's knife. In some types surgery is the only possible treatment.

And, if the surgeon has to work on you, don't be scared. Modern surgery is nothing in the world for any intelligent person to fear.

Once, someone very dear to me was suspected as a possible cancer victim. The doctors weren't sure, but the only way to find out was to cut and examine.

They were so kind at the hospital I can never properly repay them.

The surgeon was gentle and understanding and sympathetic. They performed the operation. And I felt that the surgeon and the nurses and all those professional people at the hospital were just as sincere in saying "Thank God," when they found it wasn't cancer, as I was, myself.

If ever a loved one of yours is in a similar condition, don't hesitate. Go to a good hospital, get a good surgeon, and believe me, everything will be all right.

Question Box On the Bible

By W. L. PETTINGILL.

SALVATION DURING THE TRIBULATION.

Will there be any saved during the great tribulation?

Yes, the seventh chapter of the Revelation speaks first of the sealed remnant of Israel who after the capture of the saved will preach the gospel of the kingdom in all the world as a testimony unto all nations (Matt. 24:14). Then beginning at the ninth verse of Revelation seven you see the result of the preaching of these evangelists in the salvation of an innumerable company out of every tribe, and people, and language.

The 13th verse of the same chapter puts the question as to who these people might be. And the answer is found in the 14th verse which must be read in the revised version: "These are they that come out of the great tribulation, and they washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God; and they serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne shall spread his tabernacle over them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun strike upon them, nor any heat; for the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne shall be their shepherd, and shall guide them unto fountains of waters of life, and God shall wipe every tear from their eyes."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Government and NEW YORK, Industrial Jobs

April 24.—Harry Byrd, of Virginia, estimates the number of state, county and municipal employees, hereinafter referred to simply as state employees, at four million. A year ago, however, George Brabson, a special attorney in the Internal Revenue Department in Washington, estimated their number at 4,891,000. According to the World Almanac, the total number of jobs that industry was able to provide in 1935 was 43,845,000. Such figures cannot be accurate but they are good enough to illustrate the fact that for every ten jobs that business can offer, state government provides one.

Many of these state jobs are rank fakes involving purely imaginary duties or none whatever. The city and county governments are absolutely crawling with parasites of this type, and in a conspicuous case in New York a couple of years ago a man holding a fat, but useless position, which was supposed to require intelligence, was accused of being unable to write his name and refused to face a showdown on the question.

In business, where, generally speaking, every job has to show a profit and there are no sinecures except a few dogouts for useless sons and in-laws of owners and executives, the average pay in 1935 was $1,244. Senator Byrd has estimated that the state employees' average pay is $1,500.

Evasive Still, it is argued that it would be not only unconstitutional to compel state employees to pay the federal income tax but hardly worth the trouble. This probable return from the application of the federal income tax to this exempt class has been estimated by the treasury at only $15,000,000, but that reckoning fails to take into consideration the fact that if the members of this class were compelled to declare and pay the tax on their public pay, many of the persons who have income from other sources would be thrown into higher brackets.

Citing from incomplete records for 1935, Mr. Brabson built a table about a year ago showing that only 4,300,691 returns were filed since their failure to pay the tax on their public pay, many of the persons who have income from other sources would be thrown into higher brackets.

Mr. Brabson goes back to 1913, when the amendment became effective, to trace the development of exemptions. At that time, he says, the people generally understood that every person and corporation having a measurable income was liable for some tax. But, although the people had this thought in mind when they adopted the amendment, the first tax law contained jokers and outright immunities which reduced the base to a pin-point. And, since 1913 that small proportion of citizens who contribute anything to the federal government in income tax has been further reduced 50 per cent.

Millions of "The ratio of non-taxable income is appalling," Mr. Brabson wrote in the Tax Magazine. "In 1933 there were approximately forty-one million persons gainfully employed. Add to that ten million who, by conservative estimate, are not employed but receive income from various sources, the total is fifty-one million subject to tax. Out of that total in 1933 we find that less than two million actually paid. That is, only 3.9 per cent of those having income are paying a direct tax in support of the federal government."

Mr. Brabson does a strong job of body-punching on the argument that if the tax were extended to state employees, capable people would be deterred from entering the state employ and that their efficiency would be impaired. Oh, yeah! says he. And if they refused to enter state employment then what other employment would they select? Because if they shunned the so-called public service, they would have to hire out in the private industry, in which they would have to pay the tax and no ifs or ands about it. He refrains from saying also that most of them couldn't be blasted out of their public jobs because the precious efficiency, which is spoken of with such great constitutional piety, is notoriously low and the requirements for job-holding under politics in a great proportion of public jobs have nothing to do with ability.

Anyway, there you are: About one-eleventh of the total of employed Americans, with earnings about $5 a week higher than those of the workmen, are exempt because, among other reasons, they might sulk and brood and waste the state's time gossiping around the water-cooler about the foul injustice of a law compelling them to pay their fair share.

They Aren't Equal If One Can Make the Other Explain

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

If ever congress succeeds in broadening the base of the income tax—that is, lowering the exemption in order to make more people pay—there will be such an uproar as this land seldom has heard. For collection of the income tax, which is more intimate and personal than any other, exposes the taxpayer to indignities and humiliations such as law-abiding citizens rarely experience in a free land.

Paying other taxes seems a simple business transaction. The citizen reports the value of his property, or authorized persons assess its value, and an official tells him what tax he must pay. Other taxes are imposed upon him in various ways, and collected by various agencies, but in every case the amount to be paid is determined by the law's agents. If he pays it, that ends the matter.

But the income tax requires him to fix his own obligation. He sets down the amount of his income; makes such deductions as the law permits for dependents, benevolences, expenses and losses; and then computes, as best he can, the tax he must pay.

He doesn't "claim" a certain income; he merely reports it. But he claims the deductions, carefully explaining why he is entitled to them, and makes affidavit that all of his statements are true.

Payment of the tax doesn't end the matter, for he had every opportunity to cheat, and the government apparently assumes that he did it.

In due time a stranger appears, armed with all the authority of government, to "check his return"—i. e. to check his truthfulness.

If he reported losses, he must produce evidence to establish them. If he gave 15 per cent of his income to benevolences, he must show records to prove it. He must show his check stubs, his bank deposits, his family secrets and his private books. He must answer questions and make explanations.

And he is made to feel like a suspected criminal on a witness stand, or a small boy being cross-examined about a mysteriously broken window.

One who has attempted fraud expects such treatment and deserves it; others feel humiliated and shamed and belittled by the indignity of it.

Such experiences make free men fear and dread more government management. If all taxpayers were exposed to the same treatment, the old passion for liberty would be revived.

REPRESENTING GEORGIA

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—At the close of business on March 31, this year, the cumulative total of applications for social security account numbers in Georgia totaled 660,664, according to Representative Doughton, of North Carolina.

The chairman of the most important committee of the house—ways and means—stated on the floor that lump-sum payments under federal old-age insurance, as of March 31, 1936, totaled 1,430 in the state, with payments amounting to $9,537.82. The average payment was $25.10.

He also pointed out that the estimated number of persons employed as of December 15, 1937, in Georgia, in jobs covered by state unemployment compensation laws was 313,000.

"The number of checks issued," Doughton said, "gives no indication of the number of individuals who may be receiving compensation since it includes successive weekly payments to the same individuals."

He explained that the unemployment trust fund in Georgia, as of March 31, 1936, was $6,150,000, with earnings of $46,082.93, and a balance of $6,196,082.93.

The total unemployment compensation and employment service grants in the state from December, 1936, to April 5, 1936, was $237,175.24.

373 Aids The number of recipients of public assistance in Georgia for February, 1936, was 25,923, plus 373 aids to the blind. The amount of obligations incurred for payments to recipients of public assistance for February of this year was $336,143, which included old age assistance of $76,136, and aid to the blind of $10,504.

Federal public assistance grants to Georgia, February 1, 1936, to June 30, 1936, Doughton said, was $1,127,886.59 for the aged; $42,596.35 for the blind and $232,9

Roosevelt Writes On Social Security

President's Article Tells of Act's Evolution as Need for Financial Support in Old Age Was Seen.

ARTICLE NO. 29.

(Editor's Introductory Note—"There is no tragedy in growing old," said the President, "but there is tragedy in growing old without means of support.")

He was addressing the Advisory Council of the Committee on Economic Security, appointed in mid-1934 to study the problem of government insurance for the aged, infirm and unemployed. Townsends, share-the-wealthers and others were then clamoring so loudly that the President wasn't sure the time was ripe for such measures.

"Organizations promoting fantastic schemes have aroused hopes which cannot possibly be fulfilled," he said. "Through their activities they have increased the difficulties of getting sound legislation."

The group organized to study social security consisted of men and women drawn from departments of the government and from various private activities, including insurance

President Gets Names Of Towns Reversed

(Editor's Note—"My friends, I am glad to come to Bloomington, Ind., to address the public," said the President, "but I am not in Bloomington, Ind., on October 14, 1936. But he was not in Bloomington, Ind., which is in New York; he was in Bloomington, Ill. The newspaper correspondents laughed. Although the slip is one of the sort that happens to touring public speakers innumerable times, the President has an explanation for it, and it is a sentimental one.)

It will be noticed that in my remarks at Bloomington, Ill., I referred to the city of Bloomington. The mistake caused much amusement among the members of the press and of my party on the campaign train.

The reason for the error was that I had received a telegram that very morning stating that my old friend, former Assemblyman John K. Evans, of Bloomington, N. Y., was very ill. In fact, he died in 1937. It was a former close associate of mine during the senatorial contest in the 1911 legislature in Albany.

I was thinking of him and our past association, as I proceeded to the rear platform of the train to speak. The "slip" was caused by the fact that my thoughts at the time, and I did not realize the mistake until the train was again under way and it was laughably brought to my attention.

act provides for grants of money to states to help them meet the cost of old-age pensions allowed under the state laws to old people in need of relief. The grants are to match the amount contributed by the state, with a maximum federal contribution of $15 per month for each individual plus a small amount for administrative purposes.

(2) The statute also provides for a tax for old-age insurance to be levied in equal amounts upon all employers and employees (with a few exceptions) commencing at 1 per cent and gradually increasing to 3 per cent each. Out of these taxes the federal government will pay a definite amount of money as a retirement pension commencing January 1, 1942, ranging from a minimum of $10 per month to $85 per month, depending upon the number of working years during which the employee has contributed, to retired individuals 65 years of age and over.

The act also authorizes grants to the states to assist them in relief to dependent children and blind persons. To obtain this federal assistance each state must submit a plan conforming to certain standards established by the act, and the board must approve the plan. The grants for aid to the blind are on an equal matching basis with each state, but the federal cost is not to exceed $15 per month for each individual plus a small amount for administrative purposes. Grants for dependent children are authorized on the basis of $1 federal money for each $2 spent by the state.

Georgian's Death Stirs Memories At Capitol

Employee Recalls When Firebrand Bartlett Pulled Knife on Colleague.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—(P) If the spirit of Charles L. Bartlett, former Georgia congressman of the old southern school of firebrands who died Thursday at Macon at the age of 83, ever hovers about the house of representatives the chamber will be hardly recognizable.

For, in the words of old-time house employees who remember him, many changes have taken place since the fiery Bartlett, a mite of a man who possessed the temper of a giant, enlivened sessions three decades ago with demonstrations of knife wielding, book throwing, ink well tossing and rough-and-tumble oratory.

Since Bartlett left congress 24 years ago after serving 20 consecutive years from the old fifth Georgia district, desks have been removed and rows of theater-like seats substituted; members go down into the well and turn their backs to the speaker when addressing the house, and a spirit of comradeship prevails among members of opposing factions whereas in the old days it was bitter business.

William Tyler Page, who has been a house employee for nearly 50 years in various capacities, remembered Bartlett well, especially two of his physical outbursts—one the attempted heaving of a large book and the other a knife-wielding episode.

Page, former Republican clerk of the house who was member of the house accounts committee for 14 years while Bartlett was a member, described the Georgian as a "very temperamental and at times uncontrollable member, but always able and conscientious."

"If he were in the house now, he would be a Democratic firebrand," Page said with a smile.

Page recalled the book-tossing incident as a very amusing episode.

"Judge Bartlett became irked at something Charles N. Brumm, a Republican representative from Pennsylvania, had said," Page related. "Brumm, at the time, happened to be on the Democratic side, and Bartlett went after him with a copy of the United States statutes—a very large volume.

"The judge was a small man, and when he undertook to throw the volume at Brumm it fell at his own feet. The book was so big he just couldn't throw it."

Page said the knife-wielding episode he remembers occurred about 1904 or 1905 when the accounts committee, of which Bartlett was the ranking Democratic member, brought in a resolution during a night session to increase the compensation of an employee.

"George Southwick, a Republican congressman from Albany, N. Y., took exception to the resolution because it did not also embrace another employee who was a constituent of his," Page said.

Southwick began to make some slurring remarks about the committee which Bartlett didn't like.

Small Pocket Knife. "Bartlett rushed across the main aisle toward Southwick opening a small pocket knife.

Another old-time house employee who has vivid recollection of Bartlett is R. J. Spier, formerly of Macon, who served 12 years as his secretary, being succeeded by Miss Aline Hardin.

Spier remembered Bartlett as "the best constitutional lawyer in the house," and an advocate of state's rights. He agreed with Page that if Bartlett were in the house today he would be an anti-New Dealer.

Expert Says U.S. Is on 'Sit-Down' Against Exercise

Americans sit down too much for their physical good, a health authority said yesterday.

Dr. N. P. Neilson, of Stanford University, newly named president of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation which concluded sessions here Saturday, blamed modern conveniences.

He urged an end to the "sit-down strike" against big muscle exercise.

"The sit-down pastimes have their place in modern life," he went on, "but forceful exercise should not be cast aside because they have. It is no less than a crime to allow children to go through school without opportunity for a physical education program."

KID'S MOTHER HIRES PUBLICITY AGENT

Seeks To Enlighten Public on Her Side of Fight for Fortune.

HOLLYWOOD, April 24.—(UP) Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein hired a press agent today to offset the flood of publicity that has been going to her son, Jackie Coogan, and to enlighten the public more fully on her side of their dispute over control of his movie-earned fortune.

Most of the publicity has been going to Coogan who has pulled no punches in accusing his mother and step-father, Arthur Bernstein, of freezing him out of the family circle without giving him a penny of the $4,000,000 he says he earned as "The Kid" of the silent screen.

The news that Dave Epstein, Hollywood press agent, had been retained to offset the effect of such statements brought a smile to the face of Coogan's attorney, William Rains.

"We shall be glad to subpoena Mr. Epstein and find out how much of Jackie's earnings are being spent for his salary," Rains said.

As his first move, Epstein scheduled a press conference for Mrs. Bernstein sometime this week.

"Too much has been said on the other side, and not enough on the side," he commented. "Coogan's suit smacks like a publicity stunt anyhow."

Coogan, who was to have gone to New York for a radio appearance today, instead stayed at home with his wife, blonde Betty Grable, who has been supporting him since he found himself a penniless millionaire.

RALEIGH CRISP, 46, DIES AFTER CRASH

Highway Foreman Succumbs in S. C. Hospital.

CLAYTON, Ga., April 24.—Raleigh Crisp, 46, maintenance foreman, state highway, and a resident of Clayton, died in an automobile accident near Seneca, S. C., on Friday evening. Bill Moseley, the driver of the car, was said to be unhurt.

Crisp was pinned underneath the car when it is said to have struck a bank and upset.

He leaves a wife, one son, Lionel, and one daughter, Catherine; one brother, Louis Crisp, of Mountain Rest, S. C., and one sister, Mrs. John Lenning, of Clayton. Funeral services will be conducted at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon by the Rev. Frank Q. Echols, pastor of Clayton Methodist church, at Antioch church, six miles east of Clayton. R. E. Cannon, funeral director, will have charge of burial at Antioch cemetery.

10 Men To Be Selected To Plan the Career of Boy, 14, According to an Idea Conceived by Widowed Mother

Three Accept Her Invitation and Will Choose 7 Other Sponsors.

NEW YORK, April 24.—(UP)—Some night soon 10 men are going to sit down at the Yale Club and start planning the life of Frederick Werle, 14 years old, who does not particularly care to have his life planned.

Frederick's mother, Mrs. Dorothy E. Werle, advertised two weeks ago for "ten Christian gentlemen to advise and assist, not financially, in furthering his business career."

A plump blonde in a lavender frock, Mrs. Werle has been a widow 13 years. She has accepted three men from those who answered her appeal, and these are to select the other seven sponsors. None of them has yet met Frederick.

Mrs. Werle said she became ill recently and conceived her idea during convalescence.

"I had been in bed four days," she said, "and began to wonder about things. In recent years I have been studying oriental religions and I discovered that at circumcision Jewish boys are given 12 sponsors, who are supposed to assist them in later life. It seemed to me that this would be a wonderful idea to apply to my boy, who is approaching manhood

DELAY BY RIVERS BELIEVED STRATEGY

Held To Be Gainful In That It Will Prolong Start of Campaign Attacks.

By BEN F. MEYER, Associated Press Staff Writer.

What Governor Rivers didn't say in his much-publicized speech Saturday night to the state Democratic committee aroused more speculation in political circles yesterday than what he did say.

Rivers' friends and advisers had been talking all last week that the Governor would announce at the meeting whether he would seek re-election or run against Senior United States Senator Walter F. George, of Vienna, who comes up for re-election this year. Almost everybody said he would announce his candidacy for re-election.

Political observers began putting two and two together yesterday and wondering what Rivers' plans would add up to.

How Observers Talk.

Here are some things they had to talk about: When President Roosevelt came to Georgia recently for a rest, Mr. Roosevelt received Rivers' frequently. What they talked about is their secret, but political quarters believed the two likely surveyed the senatorial situation in Georgia.

Mr. Roosevelt's chief political counselor, Postmaster General James Farley, will be in Georgia this week to dedicate postoffices. The Georgia Association of County Commissioners meets this week in Macon.

Some members of this association have criticized pointedly the Governor's tax reform program. Some of them don't like the outlook for reduced financial support for counties as a result of the Rivers-sponsored homestead and household goods tax exemption measures. What the commissioners say and do at the Macon meeting might possibly have some bearing on Rivers' plans.

Delay Held Gainful.

On the Rivers-for-re-election idea, there is this thought: Most politicians concede that under the peculiar situation of the present, Rivers would have had little to gain by a long campaign. An announcement would have brought active opposition to his policies, and a constant drumming criticism of them. With Rivers not actively a candidate for re-election, if indeed a candidate at all, it makes the race more difficult for his opponents. It doesn't give them as much to shoot at.

GROUP TO REVIEW PRESBYTERY'S WORK

Stewardship, Finance Body Meets Tomorrow for Activities Reports.

Preparatory to drafting its report to the annual session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in United States, which meets May 19 at Meridian, Miss., the committee on stewardship and finance will meet at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Henry Grady hotel to review activities of the year which closed March 31.

A meeting of the promotion committee is scheduled for this morning at 9 o'clock, at the Henry Grady. Discussion of plans for the mission study season, of approval of the church calendar for 1938-1939 and assignment of dates and consideration of stewardship and finance reports comprise the docket.

GIRL FACES COURT IN POISON DEATHS

Not Convicted She Slews Two, Attorney Asserts.

NEW YORK, April 24.—(UP)—Elizabeth Wagner, 23, who allegedly confessed poisoning her two brothers, will be arraigned tomorrow in felony court on a homicide charge in connection with the boys' deaths.

Her attorney, Robert Molinari, will seek a three-day adjournment because, he said, he was not convinced "at this time that Elizabeth did it."

The girl was arrested Saturday after she allegedly admitted she had fed rat poison to her brothers, Henry, 21, and Charles, 14, in orange juice and milk.

EDDIE CANTOR, ILL, CANCELS BROADCAST

NEW YORK, April 24.—(P)—Illness tonight forced Eddie Cantor to cancel a radio broadcast (CBS) scheduled for Monday night.

The radio and screen comedian was sent to bed with an attack of influenza last Monday but left his hotel Wednesday to appear at a charity benefit. His temperature today was 102.

and needs the advice and assistance that mothers cannot give." The three sponsors so far chosen, she said, are so enthusiastic about her idea that she now hopes it will become a national movement.

"So much good could be done," she said. "Is it not so? I heard from one of the sponsors that a woman in Massachusetts is going to do the same thing for her boy. A woman who is alone with her son needs the feeling of security such a plan would give her."

Dr. Carter Observes 56th Year As Pastor of Friendship Church

Baptist Minister Born Into Slavery Recalls Sleeping in Piano Box, Working as Cobbler, While Studying at Seminary.

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Pastor Dr. H. B. Carter, 56 years old, he led a movement to erect a building next door to the church for the care of old people, an institution which has served in a wonderful way and is now known as the Carter Home for the Aged.

During his long ministry, many noted negro leaders have gone forth from Friendship church, including the late Dr. John Hope, president of Atlanta University; Mordecai Johnson, John W. Davis, B. G. Brawley and many others. Himself a natural leader, Dr. Carter has constantly sought to discover and develop leaders for his race.

Has Baptized Hundreds.

I asked Dr. Carter the other day how many people he had baptized in the 56 years that he has served as pastor at Friendship. "I wish I could tell you, but I would have to go to the records and work a long time to get the exact number. I baptized 550 at one time. That was following the great Moody revival in Atlanta. I remember Dr. Landrum told me he received a great number in the First Baptist church, and Dr. MacDonald baptized many into the old Second Baptist church at the same time," he said.

BAPTISTS REPORT MEMBERSHIP GAINS

Increase of 113,287 Over 1936 Shown; Collections Also Rise.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 24.—(P)—Membership in churches of the Southern Baptist Convention, embracing 18 states and the District of Columbia, soared to 4,595,802 during 1937, Dr. E. P. Aldredge of the Sunday school board announced today.

Dr. Aldredge, in a report prepared for delivery before the convention's meeting at Richmond, Va., May 12-15, said this number represented a gain of 113,287 members over 1936. He added that the 173 new churches established last year brought the total to 24,824.

Splendid Gains.

"For the first time since the great depression, Southern Baptists had in 1937 a year of splendid gains in all departments of work," said Dr. Aldredge, secretary of the board's department of survey, statistics and information. His report stated that the 24,824 churches last year gave for their own congregational purposes $26,363,537, or 82.4 per cent of the total amount of gifts—$32,265,687. This represented an increase of $3,077,000 as compared with the 1936 figures.

Largest Gains.

Largest gain was noted, the report said, in the number of daily vacation Bible schools, which reached a total of 2,520 with an enrollment of 264,247. Average daily attendance was 198,122.

Dr. Aldredge said the number of training union organizations had climbed to a total of 35,353, with a membership of 742,201, a net gain of 49,015 young persons over the previous period.

The Woman's Missionary Union, which celebrates its golden jubilee at Richmond, May 8-11, now has a total of 34,594 units, including its young people's organizations, with a membership of 612,077.

AIR-CONDITIONING TO BE FEATURE OF MURRAY COMPANY

GENERAL ELECTRIC AWARDS FRANCHISE TO BIG LOCAL PLANT

Experienced Men, With C. N. Rink as Manager, To Handle the Work.

The Murray Company, long-established Atlanta concern, whose large machinery manufacturing plant in the western section of the city has built thousands of cotton gins and cotton gin machinery in the past, has added a new and highly important feature to the excellent service it has rendered—and is still rendering—to the people of the south.

C. N. Rink, the company has been appointed as exclusive distributor of General Electric Company's air-conditioning equipment. This includes heating, cooling, ventilation engineering, installation and general service pertaining to this new and fast-developing scientific improvement—now almost a necessity—for office or public buildings, stores, hotels, industrial plants, churches, homes, or any indoor place where workers or the public are accustomed to gather.

The Murray Company has been given exclusive franchises for air-conditioning equipment and service in 52 counties of Georgia, which includes practically all populous sections of the state of sufficient size and importance as to require the need of this advanced improvement in the future.

Men Trained for Service. This added feature of service by this long-established and well-known Atlanta company is manned by men of training and long experience, at the head of which is C. N. Rink, as manager, with eight years of practical experience in this work. He comes to Atlanta from Buffalo, N. Y. He is a graduate of Cornell University, in the class of 1930, with an M. E. degree, and until coming to Atlanta was connected with the Buffalo Forge Company for eight years, the last year as office manager in Atlanta.

Assisting Mr. Rink is C. Boynton Cole, chief engineer of Georgia Tech graduate with an M. E. degree. For five years he has been engaged with the General Electric Company in this particular line of work, and his ability and training well equips him for his duties as assistant to the manager.

W. F. Patrick, also an engineer, specializing in heating, with four years' experience in engineering and contracting with General Electric equipment, is also a valuable assistant in the cooling and air-conditioning work to be featured by the Murray Company.

While this new service has just been added to the Atlanta plant, it is now one of the outstanding features of service with the Murray Company in Dallas, Texas, where the big plant there has been installing and handling General Electric air-conditioning equipment for two years. It has only recently secured the contract for installation in a 16-story and an 11-story office building there, involving around $200,000. Since the first of the month the Dallas division has taken on the General Electric franchise for the Fort Worth territory.

As pioneer builders of the Murray gins, this company has been established for nearly a half century. In 1900 the company was organized and its first small gin machinery manufacturing plant was established in Dallas. Three years later a much larger plant was erected, and in 1912, due to the increased demand for Murray equipment, a large plant in Atlanta was acquired. Both these plants have been enlarged from time to time and today cover more than 30 acres.

Murray Company Factory To Feature Air-Conditioning Equipment

Atlanta plant of the Murray Company, old established and well-known gin machinery manufacturing concern, recently appointed exclusive distributors of General Electric Company's heating, cooling and air-conditioning equipment—ventilation engineering, installation, service—under the direction of C. N. Rink, manager. The franchise includes 52 counties in Georgia. Franchise for this nationally known General Electric equipment has been handled for two years with success by the large Murray factory in Dallas, Texas.

And while the name Murray is still recognized as among the leaders in the manufacture of cotton gin machinery, and the original work for which it was organized is still carried on—the new and added feature of exclusive distributorship of General Electric Company's air-conditioning equipment in 50 counties of Georgia is to be one of its chief features of service in the future.

CHURCH UNION FOES STUDY LEGAL STEPS

Anti-Unificationists Will Consider Proposal at Luncheon Today.

Proposed legal steps in the fight against unification of northern and southern branches of the Methodist church will be discussed here today.

A luncheon meeting of the legal committee of the Laymen's Organization for the Preservation of the Southern Methodist Church will be held at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Henry Grady hotel.

Judge Augustus M. Roan will preside, and speakers will include former Governor John M. Slaton, Collins Denny Jr., former Virginia state attorney general and head of the committee; Judge James C. Davis; Young Harris Fraser, Seals Aiken, Robert Lee Avery and others.

Out-of-town anti-unificationists expected to attend include C. J. Stewart, of Atlanta; B. W. Crouch, of Saluda, S. C.; Charlton Durant, of Manning, S. C.; C. Baxter Jones, of Macon; Garland M. Jones, of Newnan; Hattin Lovejoy, of LaGrange, and John J. Jones, of Waynesboro.

The luncheon meeting will precede a mass meeting in Birmingham tomorrow night, at which Bishop Collins Denny Sr. will be principal speaker.

RULING AWAITED ON DIVORCE LAW

Decision by Arkansas Court Expected Today.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 24. (UP)—Validity of a 1937 act making three years' separation a ground for divorce was expected to be ruled upon by the Arkansas supreme court tomorrow.

It would be the first complete judicial interpretation of the statute and will be concerned in a test case from El Dorado, Mrs. Mary Lynn White appealed from a decree of Chancellor George M. Leroy granting a divorce to Dr. L. E. White.

Mrs. White testified in chancery court that her husband left her without her consent in 1934. She said he refused to listen to her entreaties to return home.

COMMENCEMENT SERMON. YATESVILLE, Ga., April 24.—The Rev. John Tate, of Barnesville, will preach the commencement sermon in Yatesville High school auditorium May 23.

CABINET SHOP BUSY WITH SCREEN WORK

Well-Known Concern Also Making Fixtures for Prospective Saloonists.

With the warm summer weather ushering in the pesky mosquito and the usual plague of flies, to say nothing of other insects that constitute pests around the home and office, the Atlanta Cabinet Shop, at 891 Edgewood avenue, is finding itself busy with the manufacture of window, door and porch screens. Now is the time to be thinking of this precaution, and evidently many are thinking of this well-known concern, which has been building window and porch screens, office fixtures, truck bodies, built-in cabinets and doing woodwork of all kinds in Atlanta for the past 10 years.

Just now, in addition to supplying many new homes and homes already occupied with protective screens of various sizes and kinds, the cabinet shop finds many customers among those who are contemplating entering the legal whisky-selling list, and the concern is building a number of fixtures and built-in shelves and cabinets for these prospective dealers.

In its spacious shop on Edgewood avenue, the concern is quite busy these days on these various lines, its screen and woodwork being well known and recognized as among the best and most reliable available.

Another feature that the concern is suggesting to home owners is to have their residences and offices, where not amply protected from the cold winds of winter, to let them weather-strip them now during the warm weather. "Many people make the mistake of waiting until they begin to feel the bite of cold winds as winter approaches before they think of the protection of weather-stripping," said an official of the concern.

"But now is the time, when the work will not open up premises to let cold in. Such work as this should be done in the summer, and we are ready to take care of all such orders."

The Atlanta Cabinet Shop has been operating for many years. Its president is J. G. Street, with B. M. Street, secretary and treasurer.

Atlanta Company Busy Reclaiming Old Mattresses

"Uneasy lies the bed"—to paraphrase a bit, but nothing is more uncomfortable nor lies more uneasy than a hard, knotty mattress.

That's the reason why Paul G. Hornbuckle, who owns and manages the Gate City Mattress Company, at 625 Edgewood avenue, and who has grown up in the mattress renovating business, is being kept busy these days reclaiming and renovating mattresses for Atlanta housewives. He has been at his present plant for 11 years.

The Gate City Mattress Company, while buying itself with the make-over of old mattresses and the creation of new ones, is featuring just now the popular inner-spring mattress. This type of mattress has been growing in favor for the past several years.

Mr. Hornbuckle is recommending this type to those who want bed comfort. His company is able to supply a new one entirely, or can take your old mattress, and after steam sterilizing it and otherwise making it more suitable for your home, can place inside it a pair of springs which can supply, thus providing an excellent spring-field mattress.

The company carries in stock a full supply of all ticking in various colors, and offers a one-day service in making over your old mattress, and at most reasonable prices. They can make them in any size desired. Also is carried a line of gliders with cushions for them.

"Featherbeds have somewhat gone out of style," said Mr. Hornbuckle, "and there are many people still using them. Feathers these days are mostly used for pillows, but whether for beds or pillows, we have the latest steam sterilizing machines for making feathers practically like new, and without any harm. We will be glad to handle this work for anyone who has feathers they would like to have made into beds or pillows."

The company maintains a prompt truck service, and a telephone call will bring quick action for those who need their old mattresses completely worked over. Delivery can be made in one day if necessary.

CLOUDY BUT WARMER FORECAST FOR TODAY

Partly cloudy and slightly warmer is the weather prospect for Atlanta today, according to the forecast at the Candler airport weather office issued last night.

Temperatures are due to range between 52 degrees and 75 degrees. The mercury swung yesterday between a low of 48 degrees and a high of 69 degrees.

PRESIDENT WORKS ON MONOPOLY PLEA

Takes River Cruise on Eve of Message Tomorrow on Tax Exemption.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—(AP) President Roosevelt had an opportunity to work in the tranquil atmosphere of a river cruise today on his anti-monopoly message to congress, which may provide a major issue for this year's congressional elections.

It was assumed generally in the capital that he already had completed another special message to be delivered to congress tomorrow on the subject of tax exemption. In this the President has indicated he would urge removal of tax exemptions from public salaries and the income of federal and state securities.

Mr. Roosevelt returned to the White House shortly before 6 p. m. Speculation centered on the monopoly message, which will go to Capitol Hill before the President leaves Washington Friday for a fishing trip.

FOREIGN WAR VETS TO RAISE FUNDS

'Flag Button' Sale Will Be Held Wednesday.

A "flag button" sale to raise funds for charitable, patriotic and civic work will be conducted Wednesday by Marcus W. Beck Jr., Post No. 3027, Veterans of Foreign Wars, as part of the organization's national observance of Americanism Day.

Several hundred ladies will serve as workers for the campaign. William L. Van Dyke, past post commander and commander of the Georgia department, is in charge of the sale.

"On this day we rededicate ourselves and renew with increased vigor our opposition to all subversive movements which conflict with the ideas and principles of the Constitution of the United States," he said.

GOLD SHIELD GROUP GIVES MOTH-PROOF STORAGE SERVICE

Year - Round Protection Afforded Through Large Atlanta Plant.

Recognizing for several years that protective storage is an important part of the complete maintenance service of personal clothing and household furnishings, the Gold Shield Group of Launderers and Dry Cleaners, have gone the limit to provide just such service.

Following out this idea the Gold Shield Group has secured the large plant shown on this page in order to provide a safe and protective storage department, not only for their Atlanta customers, but out-of-town residents can—and are—taking full advantage of these up-to-date protective storage facilities, made just as safe and convenient as engineering skill and science can furnish.

This big plant is a separate building, with seven floors of storage space (approximately 100,000 square feet), which is as distinct a department as their dry cleaning and laundering departments.

Heading the Gold Shield Group of Launderers and Dry Cleaners is S. R. Greenblatt, president, and the various concerns represented in the group are the American Capital City, Decatur, Excelsior, Guthman, May's, Piedmont, Trio, and Troy-Perless laundries.

"We provide this perfect safety for our customers," said Mr. Greenblatt, "by reason of the fact that each and every article received for storage is carefully put through a moth-eradication process which, while perfectly harmless to fur and fabric, completely kills all forms of insect life, including moths and carpet beetles, and the eggs and larvae of both. Confidence of our customers is increased under this process because it is approved by the United States Department of Agriculture as being effective. Proper handling of the articles in the storage chambers, of course, prevents reinfestation."

The big storage plant is of fire-proof construction, and its contents are adequately insured at all times, says Mr. Greenblatt. In addition the plant is equipped with ingenious automatic devices to guard against theft at all times, day or night, and to make assurance doubly sure full theft insurance is always carried.

Air-Conditioning System. "Heat and dryness are enemies of furs," continued Mr. Greenblatt. "Gold Shield has entirely vanquished them by installation of a modern air-conditioning system which constantly keeps the temperature cooled to the proper degree found most beneficial to furs, and which constantly maintains the proper degree of humidity to keep pelts soft and pliable. Articles in storage are not contaminated by the dirt particles which circulate in unwashed air, for the air-conditioning system washes all air admitted to the storage chambers and this washed, cooled air is constantly circulated. Fur coats and woolen garments swing from hangers inside individual paper bags, hung far enough apart for this clean, cold air to circulate freely among them. For this reason, there is no mildew in Gold Shield vaults, and the storage odor which develops in many improperly equipped vaults is entirely absent. A garment can be taken from its hanger and worn immediately; for it is just as clean, as sweet and as fresh as it was when it was placed inside the vault."

Gold Shield offers year-round storage for garments and household furnishings. In the spring and summer Gold Shield customers store their furs, woolen wearing apparel, blankets, quilts, rugs, draperies, etc. In the fall and winter Gold Shield customers store their summer clothing, their summer curtains and draperies, their light, summer rugs, etc. Thus homes and clothes closets are not cluttered and crowded with out-of-season apparel and furnishings. Gold Shield protective storage is available to out-of-town people. All that is necessary is for them to send whatever they want stored by insured parcel post or by express, together with a letter containing their estimation of the value of each individual article. Storage charges are only a small percentage of the declared valuation, and, as an added convenience, even this small charge is not payable until the owner withdraws his articles from the storage vaults.

The Thin Grey Line

To the honor of the South ... to the glory of the cause that was never lost ... to you gentlemen of the South ... this day is a living memorial. Down through the years come the roll of drums ... the clarion call of the bugle. Far through the South banners unfurl ... and The Thin Grey Line marches on ...

Our memory turns back through the long years when the young grey line marched home ... and gallant men grew strong in defeat to build a nobler South. And we built with them ... the men in Grey ... for those were the years of Rich's beginning ... together we built from the ashes a brave and glorious New South.

Tomorrow at the busy hour of noon we close our doors on the passing world and silently honor our heroes ... the living and the dead.

Joan Bennett Introduces the Very Smart All-Leather Slacks

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK CITY, Friday.—I did not have space yesterday to tell you much about my Williamsburg visit. The "Palace" has been very much more completely furnished since I was last there. Only old fabrics are used in the draperies and it creates a much greater illusion of age in the rooms. The gardens have grown up very quickly and are very attractive.

We ended our visit by paying a call on "Old Mary" in the kitchen. The guide asked her if she was 80 and she indignantly claimed to be at least a hundred. Then she told me that Mr. Rockefeller gave her the kitchen and that, though one could not sit down anywhere else, we could sit down there. She invited us to do so while she explained the uses of the various utensils.

When I saw a machine for peeling apples, I decided that we are not so clever in our modern inventions. To be sure, these machines were run by handpower, but inventors had ideas in those days.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller happened to be in Williamsburg. They asked us to dine with them at the inn and afterwards took us over to see the craft shop. They are having old pieces of furniture, pewter and silver, found in Williamsburg, reproduced and are selling them in the craft shop and other parts of the country. On the second floor of the craft shop, there is an exhibition of most interesting collection of tools which have been donated. They even have a complete set of shoemaker's tools.

We went to bed weary but filled with the beauty of the countryside and with the conviction that there was a marvelous way of learning American history. It lives all about you and I can think of nothing more educational for a youngster studying our colonial days, than an opportunity to spend a day or two in Williamsburg.

Thursday morning we visited the capitol, which has little that is modern in it. The jail has been made much more interesting by furnishings in the jailer's quarters, and last but not least, we saw Raleigh tavern, which to me is the most delightful glimpse into past history. Then we paid Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller a call in their perfectly charming, secluded and peaceful house, stopped for a glimpse at Carter's Grove and arrived at Hampton late.

Dr. and Mrs. Hovey forgave us for being tardy and the ceremonies went forward in celebration of Hampton's 70th anniversary. Into the building of this institution has gone much courage and much vision. I do not think one could be there and look into the young faces and talk to the faculty and the trustees without being moved by the courageous meeting of problems and the hope for a better future.

Mrs. Morgenstau and I flew to New York from Richmond last night. Now I am off on a round of inconsequential errands.

TODAY'S CHARM TIP

UP, ladies, is the word to keep saying over and over to yourself! UP with your head. UP with your chin, your chest. UP on your toes. Thus you become one with an "air."

Barbara Bell Styles

A GRACEFUL AFTERNOON DRESS WITH SLENDERIZING LINES.

In this beautiful design, Barbara Bell shows how becoming the new vogue for soft detailing is to women in the 34 to 46 size range. Notice the flattery of the bodice—shirred on the shoulders, flat over the bust, with a waistline cut high in the front to flatten the diaphragm, and full short sleeves. The skirt is slim at the hips, and flares a little at the hem. This dress is typical of the charming designs in women's sizes that you'll find in the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Fashion Pattern Book when you send for it. You'll enjoy making up today's design. The pattern is so easy to follow, it includes a complete and detailed sew chart, making every step very simple, and the result will be beautifully finished and professional-looking, be assured!

For Pattern No. 1517-B choose a small-figured silk print, flat crepe or georgette in black for navy or earth brown. During the summer, you'll want this dress in cool voile or tub silk.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1517-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material.

Price of pattern 15 cents. Do not send stamps.

Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Fashion Pattern Book. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from the Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns.

Hollywood Today

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

HOLLYWOOD, April 24.—

Smartest fad to hit Hollywood this spring—all leather slacks—is introduced by Joan Bennett, now appearing in Paramount's "The Texans." Joan's favorite pair are in gray with a high waistline set off by a jumper of navy blue ante-lope. A calot of pale rose suede supplies the popular "third-color accent." The blonde actress adds a cute finishing touch—a choker of pearls about the neckline.

For more dressy moments, Joan has purchased—(a) A classic dinner dress with a scroll motif in white against a black background. The dress is cut with a full, circular silhouette and stresses a short line in front with trailing treatment in black. The sleeve design is soft and flattering and the low neckline is accented by clips of beaten gold. A belt of the fabric, used at the waistline, has a double buckle of ruby colored stones reflecting the tone of Miss Bennett's lip rouge.

(b) A black lace evening gown fresh from designer Bernard Newman. The gown stresses an alluring low décolletage with invisible shoulder straps of flesh-colored net. The camisole-type bodice is accented by a sash of pink satin ribbon and a corsage of pale pink violets.

Third and last—but not the least smartest—is a two-piece suit of bright red and white print. The skirt is made with all-around, knife-pleated treatment and the single-breasted, finger-jacket with bright red buttons matching the leather belt. A gilet of white pique buttoned in red, two white carnations pinned to one shoulder, and a white pique hat covered with tiny red and blue leather stars with a row of red grosgrain at the back complete the gay ensemble.

Priscilla Lane is a fad starter, too. Her's is in the neckwear line, and for men as well as women. The ends of the tie are python skin, but the part that goes around the neck and ties is black wool jersey. Priscilla wears it with riding togs, but they're equally correct with tailored suits—if you have other python-skin accessories—such as bags or belts.

Glory novelties in Hollywood include Ann Sheridan's white kid evening gloves which have fingers for the thumb and forefinger and a mitten section for the other three fingers. The advantage is that the gloves do not interfere with jeweled rings. Diana Lewis' gloves are actually the continuation of sleeves in a red Etan jacket. The palm side of the gloves are zippered so the hands can be withdrawn from them and the glove fingers tucked in the sleeves. Fifty per cent of the stars in Hollywood wear silver fox for evening while the other half like red fox, white fox, ermine or sable. However, for daytime, tastes vary. Claudette Colbert and Margaret Sullivan prefer leopard; Margaret Lindsay and Anita Louise wear mink; Lana Turner's current favorite is skunk; Beverly Roberts votes for Persian lamb, and Mabel Todd flaunts a hat as well as coat of weasel.

Bonita Granville owns what she calls a "fruit salad" necklace. Tiny apples, pears, bunches of grapes and plums of colored catin are suspended from a slender silver chain.

Novelty of the week... Marion Talley's hose accented with gold fleur de lis, which the singer wears with a slenderizing black satin dress, trimmed at the neckline and sleeves with white rusch. Hollywood Fashion Parade... Lola Lane playing bridge on the set in navy blue slacks... Beverly Roberts at cocktail party in black dress and antique silver necklace made of flat flowers and belt to match. Later, dancing at the Trocadero in a white chiffon jersey formal and multi-colored jeweled scarf in her hair and another at the base of her V-neck... Mary Maguire on Hollywood boulevard in a cinnamon street costume, consisting of softly tailored suit, topcoat and hat of soft wool with all accessories in kid... Florence Rice with Pat di Cicco lunching at the Vendome wearing a spring jumper frock of navy blue and white—a knife-pleated skirt breaking away from extremely tight waistline, two-inch shoulder straps over a white organdy blouse.

glassful, one-fourth pint) a day provides enough vitamin C for anyone. Tomato juice is widely employed to provide the necessary vitamin C to prevent scurvy in young infants, where fresh fruit juice is not available.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield in care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: My sister and I were brought up in a very strict home and we hardly ever went out except to church and Sunday school. Of course we had few friends because we weren't allowed to go to parties and we didn't have tennis rackets, skates, swimming suits and other things that our friends had. When we asked for such things our parents said: "You are going to school now and your books are all the toys you need." Although we are 18 and 20, old enough to go out, our parents have the same ideas about us at this age as they had when we were children. They haven't any sympathy with us and can't see why we aren't satisfied to go to work and come home to be with them. Both of us have positions that support us and we think we should be our own bosses as far as boy and girl friends are concerned, but when we bring our friends there's so much talk about it we are sorry we tried it. The home seems to be for our parents and for us just so long as we sit with them. We want to leave and enjoy ourselves while we are young. What do you think of the idea?

Answer: Sallie and Sue, I am always a bit wary of siding with a couple of girls against their parents to the extent of advising the girls to leave home. However, since you are old enough to earn your living in the world of business, you are old enough to choose your friends, set up your social life and you have every right to expect sympathy and co-operation on the part of your parents, which for some reason you haven't got. Incidentally, it is the only way they can protect you, which is probably the motive for their present policy.

I suggest that you have a friendly conference and try to show your father and mother that they are cramping your style, putting you at a big disadvantage with your friends and making your home a hateful place to live. You might remind them that you spent your early youth sitting on school and church benches without protesting but now that you are grown you feel the need of a little gaiety and frivolity with young people.

Maybe they will see the justice of your position and at this late date do what they should have done when you were children, open their home to your friends and enter into your social life. If they turn you down they won't have any kick when you serve polite notice on them that you are planning to live elsewhere.

There was a time when daughters had to take on the chin whatever parents pushed at them but that time passed when daughters began to pay board, buy their own clothes, settle their own bills and it's just too bad for the old fogy parents who have a hateful difference between 1893 A. D. and 1938 A. D. They may keep their home but they can't keep their daughters in it.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Your Figure, Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

BEST DRESSED WOMEN ALMOST INVARIABLY FOLLOW CONSISTENT PROGRAM OF EXERCISE.

There has never been a "best dressed" woman who did not have a good figure, and just now it appears as though the French women, in spite of their unerring instinct for the chic, are losing out to the Americans. The Americans are rapidly learning about style, and they display an amazing determination in keeping their figures, a combination which gives them something of an edge in fashions.

In recent years you will recall that two of the most famous of the best dressed women (so named by Paris couturiers) have been the American-born Lady Mendl and Mrs. Harrison Williams, both of New York and with homes abroad. We will admit that it was probably pure coincidence that these famous women of fashion happen to have been born in this country, but it is no coincidence that both have lovely figures. They know the value of exercise.

Mrs. Harrison Williams was born beautiful and inherited a love of outdoor activity from her Kentucky forebears. Mrs. Williams would probably, however, concede the laurels for an amazing career to Lady Mendl, born Elsie de Wolfe, and not beautiful. The rumor persists that Lady Mendl was born about 1865, although it seems there must be some mistake when you consider that her daily routine of exercise includes cartwheels and standing on her head. Such a rigorous program, followed all her life, has caused Lady Mendl to be recognized as one of the world's outstanding smart women.

The woman who sets the fashion pace takes pride in her figure.

And now Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, wife of the American ambassador to London, is credited with being one of the best dressed women in public life. Mrs. Kennedy, around five feet tall, is the mother of nine children and has the figure of one of her own daughters. She is slim and trim, not "short and stocky." It takes energy, diplomacy and time to run such a large family smoothly, but Mrs. Kennedy finds time for swimming, skating and golf.

At the same fashion pool, conducted by the Fashion Academy of New York, Dolores Del Rio was named as the best dressed screen star; Yolanda, the dancer, represented the choice from the supper clubs, and Ginger Rogers, also of the screen, was named as the "all American" representative. Two of this trio are professional dancers, and Miss Del Rio began her career as a dancer. They are as noted for their beautiful figures—if not more so—as for their elegant wardrobes.

The practical lesson we all can learn from a study of the women who set the fashion pace is to take pride in our figures. A slim, tapering waist and svelte hips can add chic to any wardrobe—limited or unlimited. If you have been neglecting your exercise lately, you can make amends by following the set of exercises in the leaflet "Streamline the Midsection." There are other sets of specific exercises that can change a heavy figure into a youthful one, but no sets of exercises can help you unless you follow them daily.

New Make-Up Ensemble Luxuriously Rich and Deep in Tone.

By Lillian Mae.

This is a season of ensembles. Ensembles in wardrobe and ensembles in make-up. The day of slap and dash is over! Come now a complete new make-up group that just must be up-to-the-minute because its very name is reminiscent that there is soon to be a race which every year attracts attention of the whole country.

It is a make-up which will give the wearer charm, be she blonde or brunette, and intensify her loveliness whether she be 'teen age or matron. It will flatter her by sunlight and make her scintillate at night. It blends with practically all the new wardrobe colors.

The powder and foundation are in a neutral shade, rich in color—a shade which gives the skin that cameo-like appearance so much in vogue this spring and summer.

The lipstick and rouge—and the latter comes in both cream and cake—are of a pure, almost perfect red, with breath-taking richness and depth—a vibrant, spirit-filled shade. That's what makes the name so suitable.

Phone me at the office of The Constitution for the name of this new ensemble and the Atlanta stores at which it may be purchased. If you do not live in the city write, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Pleasant Homes

By ELIZABETH McRAE BOYKIN.

THE HISTORY OF CHAIRS.

Roman stools to the most modern tubular steel chair; the history of chairs is a wonderful tale of people brightening the corners where they sit!

Few and Far Between.

The English must have been a pretty uncomfortable race up until 1600. Chairs were few and far between and those in existence were not certainly, a modern's idea of solid comfort. Kings and high princes had chairs (or more accurately "throne"), but the average home boasted at best a hard oaken chest with arms and a back. The Tudor chair, up until the close of the 16th century, was a box with a back and arms. The Stuart period saw the introduction of chairs with legs. It was late in the reign of Good Queen Bess that upholstered chairs became popular. In 1597, Sir John Harrington wrote: "the fashion of cushioned chairs is taken up in every merchant's house." Up till then wooden seats, of the types described above, had been the order, or at best leather covered seats from Spain which were highly decorative but not too easy. In the latter part of Elizabeth's reign, lodge cushions began to be used for chairs and window seats, and these were covered with velvet, satin embroidered in colors, with pearls for ornament and with gold and silver lace.

Simple as a chair may look, it is one of the most ingenious and useful inventions of man. So we might pause, in our comfort, to give a little thanks to it, and its creators, for our hours of ease.

Bridge Lite

By HAROLD SHARPSTEEN

FIVE-SUIT BRIDGE.

One of our boyhood circus-day heroes was the chap who rode atop the rumbling lion wagon and drove 16 grays in the big street parade.

Last night, during a long, wearisome siege with five-suit bridge, we could not help feeling like our hero of by-gone days, perched on top of his lion wagon, both fists full of reins. He really must have had his hands full keeping those 16 pairs of long, black leather ribbons from getting all tangled up among the heels of useless horsepower stretched out in front of him.

As we recollect, he did seem to concentrate his attention on keeping the lead pair well in hand, while the rest of his big wide-rumped charges followed in order, dragging their singletrees behind them along the pavements. The first two horses did the leading. The last pair pulled the load. Those between just served as parade decorations, along with the glided, curving figures adorning the cage of roaring lions.

DREAMS COME TRUE.

But how we kids went for it. Some ran alongside the cage to watch the big savage beasts as they snarled and roared, paced to and fro, whipping their tails in the air. "Can you abreact the driver's seat and stubbed our toes on the bumpy pavements, trying to keep an eye on our hero. What more could any grown-up man ask for than a job like that?

Last night our dream came true when a crowd of self-appointed "madmen" decided it was high time to delve into the mysterious of triple squeeze said to be common in five-suit bridge. Like the driver of the circus lion wagon, we sat all evening with fists full of cards, trying for small slams, grand slams... super slams.

BOOK EIGHT TRICKS.

Two win 13 tricks was nothing at all. As a matter of fact it takes 13 tricks for a game in a minor suit, 12 in either major, 11 tricks for a game at notrump. A book is eight tricks.

In this bridge age of speed and simplicity, we thought it was slow and too complicated and we are still of the same opinion that five-suit bridge will never replace contract. Nevertheless, in order to properly fulfill our responsibilities and report the latest developments and trends in the field of bridge, we will, starting tomorrow, present an exposition of bidding and play for five-suit bridge.

'Til tomorrow—

"What happens?"

"You stay here—I go in."

"Gay."

"You said you wouldn't ask questions."

"I'm not asking questions. But I don't like it. Why not tell me what it's all about?"

He heard an odd little laugh.

"Isn't that a question?"

"I suppose it is in a way, but not the way you meant. Look here, my dear, I'm not an absolute fool, and I can't very well drive you to Cole Lester without guessing."

"You're not to guess. And I never said a word about Cole Lester, and—Algy, you promised."

"All right—my head's in a bag. I've never heard of Cole Lester—it's rather famous, you know—I don't know that it belongs to Francis Colesborough, and I shouldn't dream of guessing."

"You're not to Oh, Algy, you did promise!"

"Yes—I was a fool. Well, I stay here. Are you going to be long?"

"I don't know," said Gay in rather a small voice.

"You'd better have a torch." He put it into her hand. "If I'm asleep when you get back, just wake me."

Gay looked at it with a horrible sinking feeling, and then turned away.

They had stopped just short of the gates, and Algy had switched off the headlights. She put on her little torch, found her way between gateposts, and then put it out again. She must do without it if she possibly could, because her plan depended wholly on being able to get to the yew walk without being seen.

It was terribly black in the drive. She stood still and shut her eyes while she counted a hundred. When she opened them again she could see the black tracery of the trees against the sky. She began to walk up the drive. Once or twice she blundered into a holly or a yew, but for the most part she was able to keep fairly straight, and as she went on her eyes began to see more and more.

In the end she came out upon the broad sweep in front of the house and could see it plainly as a great mass rising up against the sky. There was no light anywhere. The front seemed windowless, without a gleam. She stood at the edge of the trees and tried to think which way she must go. She had to get round to the back of the house. And she remembered that there was a path.

She began to skirt the gravel sweep, keeping to the left, and presently she found what she was looking for. The path ran between shrubs. She had to use her torch once where two old hollies leaned together overhead, and once she thought she heard a footstep—some one moving, but she couldn't tell whether it was behind her or in front, or whether it was just the echo of her own footstep thrown back from the wall of the house. Her heart beat quick and frightened.

She thought, "I don't know why I came. I can't stop Sylvia. I ought to have made her tell Francis. I can't do any good this way. Oh, I do wish Algy was here." But she went on, because even if a thing isn't any good, once you've started it you've got to see it through or else despise yourself for a spineless rabbit for ever and ever.

Sylvia heard the last stroke of 12 die away. There was a tall old clock against the end wall of the corridor which struck with such a ringing sound that even after the sound had died away the air still seemed to tingle. There was a tremor now, and she waited for it to pass, because it frightened her a little. Everything frightened her a little tonight.

When the air was still again she opened a big mahogany wardrobe and took out a black satin cloak. She was still wearing the crepe dress which she had worn for dinner. She didn't very often wear black, but Francis liked it better than anything else, and she wanted to please him. She had taken the papers out of the safe the night before. No one else could have done it.

Francis never forgot his keys or left them about like other people did. But it had been quite easy for her to take them from under his pillow, and open the safe, and put them back again. She had found the papers at once, a bundle of letters marked Zero, so it was quite true what Mr. Zero had said about the letters belonging to him, and of course Francis oughtn't to keep letters that belonged to someone else, but she did feel that perhaps she ought to be a little extra nice to him tonight. And the black dress would be quite good for meeting Mr. Zero in too. It wouldn't show any marks, and if she put on her cloak and pulled the hood up over her hair, no one could possibly see her as she crossed the lawn.

The letters were in her jewel-case. She lifted the lid and found them in a flat bundle in the bottom compartment of the massive old-fashioned case. Sylvia had wrapped them in an old dark silk handkerchief, put the package in the pocket of her cloak, opened her bedroom door, and stood there listening.

The servants were all in bed long ago, and Francis was in his study. He would be there for more than an hour yet, so that there was nothing to be afraid of. She had only to walk along the corridor and down the big staircase into the hall. She wouldn't even have to pass the study. It was quite easy. Yet she stood there for a long time hearing the faint, measured tick of the old clock. There was no other sound.

When she came to the stairway she listened again, but now she could not even hear the clock ticking. As she went downstairs, she thought of what she would say if Francis met her. He wouldn't, of course, but if he did, what should she say? Biscuits—yes, that would do—she was hungry and thought she would like a biscuit.

The hall was very large. The drawing room lay on one side of it and the dining room on the other, with the study behind the dining room. There was no corresponding room on the other side, because the drawing room took up the extra space, but there was a passage which ran past the drawing room to a room that was called the parlor. It was supposed to be Sylvia's own sitting room, but she did not care for it very much. She would have liked to have the old dark panelling painted white and throw away the faded Persian rugs, but Francis would not hear of it. He said his mother had done her best to spoil the room by having a French window put in, and he wasn't going to let it go any farther.

It was the French window which was taking Sylvia to the parlor. It opened so easily, and when it was open she would only have to cross the terrace and run down the steps to be straight in line for the yew walk. It was as easy as that and it only Mr. Zero was punctual, she would be back in her room in less than 10 minutes. And what a relief that would be.

Francis Colesborough pushed his chair a little farther back from the desk at which he had been writing. He had a letter in his hand, a letter which he had no more than begun to write. The last line was incomplete. He had the air of a man who had been disturbed, yet he himself could not have said what it was that had disturbed him.

He stayed like that, listening, and heard a sound so faint that only a sense keyed to an unnatural tension would have caught it. It came to him as the sound of metal moving against metal, and immediately he remembered the window which had been unlatched two nights ago. He thought that someone had unlatched a window now.

He threw the letter down upon the blotting pad and went to the nearer window. With the curtains dropped behind him he looked out along the terrace and saw a bright rectangle aslant upon the flags. There was a light in the parlor, and the curtains had been drawn back.

The bright rectangle moved, the glass door swung. He had looked a half second too late to see who had opened it and come down the steps, but there was a shadow that slipped along the dark terrace and was gone. An open window two nights ago in town, and tonight an open door—and Sylvia slipping out—Sylvia—

He turned back into the room, pulled open a drawer, took out a small Browning pistol, and was about to load it when he heard a noise before a tenth of a minute had gone by. He ran down the terrace steps and out on to the lawn. He was quicker than Sylvia and as silent. She did not know that he was no more than a dozen yards behind her as she groped her way into the black mouth of yew alley. He halted there, and heard her going away from him beneath the overarching yews. A twig broke now and then. He heard her catch her breath. The sounds receded.

He swung about and ran along the path which lay between the rose garden and the lawn. The path went straight to the end of the lawn, turned, and went straight again to skirt the yew hedge on the farther side and come out upon a stretch of level sward.

Francis Colesborough came running by this way. He checked no light, needed none. These were paths he had trodden for forty years. He had played at hide-and-seek about the old yew walk when he was a child of five. His foot knew every step and had no need of the guiding eye. He checked at the edge of the sward and moved out upon it soft-foot and intent.

Gay came suddenly to the bushes' end and felt her feet on grass. The path had brought her out upon the wide lawn at the back of the house. She remembered it quite well. Francis had taken her through a glass door, and first there had been a wide terrace, and then steps which led to the lawn, and at the far end of the lawn a rose garden with the yew walk cutting it in two and spreading out like the top of the letter T to shut the roses in. So she had only to find the middle of the lawn and keep straight on with her back to the house until she came to the open end of the yew walk.

Several ways in which people can make magnets are known. One way is to place a piece of iron on a loadstone, and let it stay there a while.

Another way was described in a letter from my good friend, Mr. Leonard Loos, high school principal of Euclid, Ohio.

"If a person has a compass and an iron rod," he wrote, "this can make an interesting test. He can the way to do it."

"Hold the rod so it points north. Let the end toward the north be

UNCLE RAY'S Corner

MAKING YOUR OWN MAGNET.

Nature makes magnets. Hard black stones are found in certain parts of the earth, and they have the power of drawing to themselves small pieces of iron or steel. These magnets of Nature are called "loadstones," also spelled "lodestones."

After that is done, your iron rod should have the power of a magnet—not a very strong magnet, to be sure, but a magnet just the same.

The other day I made the test. From a hardware dealer, I bought two iron rods, each about two feet long and half an inch thick. I also purchased an iron bolt about eight inches long.

Using the compass to tell the true north, I placed the end of one of the rods on the floor, and struck the other end with the bolt, since I didn't have a hammer at hand.

After three or four blows I tested the rod on the compass needle, and found out all sorts of interesting things. The end I had held downward had the power of pulling the north-seeking end of the compass needle. On the other hand, it tended to push away the south-seeking end.

Any piece of iron will attract one end of a compass needle, but the test to prove your rod is magnetized is to find whether it will push the other end away.

Later I made the same tests with the other rod and with the long bolt. They, too, were turned into magnets.

How does it happen that an iron rod can be turned into a magnet? That question we shall try to answer tomorrow.

JEW IN UNIVERSITIES

REDUCED IN AUSTRIA

VIENNA, April 24.—(AP)—The minister of education announced today that henceforth the number of Austrian Jewish students in university would be limited to 2 per cent of the enrollment.

Previously, 33 per cent of students in the Medical College of Vienna University were Jews. The percentage for the entire university was 19.42.
